

SEES PASSAGE OF COURT BILL

whole federal court system—not only the supreme court. This emphasis on the lower court phase of the program and his suggested changes in judicial procedure strengthened belief in some quarters that despite the outcome of the fight over the supreme court, the administration would carry forward its drive for the rest of the original Roosevelt program.

Advances Two Reasons

Mr. Roosevelt advanced two new reasons why he is determined to proceed with the court battle. He said these reasons showed the necessity for enacting his judiciary program.

He cited as his first reason the fact that the supreme court had recessed for the summer on Tuesday of this week, leaving important cases involving the administration's power program undecided.

He said that the jurists, under law, did not need to start their vacation June 2 unless they so desired. The specific cases cited by Mr. Roosevelt were the new constitutional test of the Tennessee Valley authority which the government asked the court to review and which the court refused to take pending lower court trial; the challenge of Public Works administration power loans which the court accepted over the protest of the administration and the Electric Bond and Share test of the Utilities Holding Company act which the court refused to speed in spite of a joint request by the government and the utility.

Cites Law on Court

President Roosevelt said that the supreme court had a perfect right to go away for the summer, but noted that the law provides it hold one term a year beginning October 1, and makes no provision when that term should end.

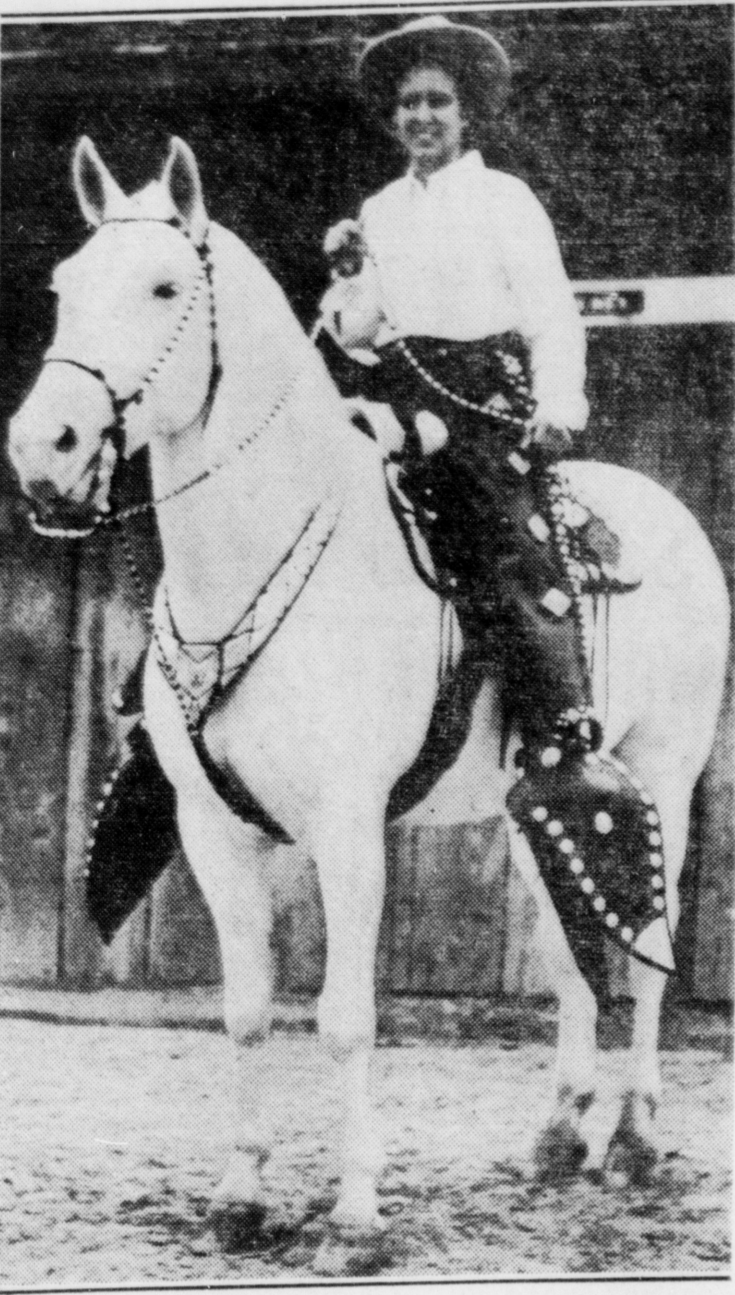

The court's action, Mr. Roosevelt said with a smile, spoke for itself. The second reason for court reform advanced by the President was the fact that lower courts are not co-operating with the government and the people in speedy consideration and settlement of cases.

Mr. Roosevelt said he believes the citizens of the country desire speedier court procedure, desiring cases to be settled within a year or, preferably, within six months. The President said most cases now take three years in lower courts.

Mr. Roosevelt used the symbolism of a "forest" and "trees" in explaining the status of his court program. The whole program, he said, is the "forest" and details such as the number of judges to be added to the supreme court are "trees."

GERMAN FREIGHTER LIMPS INTO PORT

MANILA, June 5.—(UP)—The German freighter Oliva, with fire still raging aboard, limped into port today.

The captain revealed that one member of the crew, Albert Genter, died of burns suffered in the explosion that started the blaze yesterday. Genter was buried at sea.

Arriving also was the Dutch steamer T. J. I. Karang, carrying two seriously burned seamen from the Oliva. They were taken to a hospital.

APPEAL NOTICE IN TYPEWRITER FUROR, FILED

Notice of appeal from the decision of Superior Judge G. K. Scovel, granting a writ of mandate to Auditor W. T. Lambert against Eugene Fenelon, county purchasing agent, in the typewriter controversy, was filed in superior court today by Attorney B. Z. McKinney, special counsel employed by the court supervisors to represent Fenelon.

While the notice of appeal does not specify grounds of the appeal, it was understood that the principal ground will be the court's ruling that the supervisors divested themselves of authority over purchasing of county equipment, by their appointment of a purchasing agent. The appellants, it is said, take the position that the purchasing agent is in reality an agent of the supervisors, to carry out their wishes in the matter of purchasing.

Notice of appeal today followed official filing of the court's findings yesterday. The appeal will be taken to the fourth district court of appeals, now sitting in San Diego.

HAZY COURT IDEAS DECRIED

ST. LOUIS (UP)—Justice might more nearly approach its ideal if voters knew as much about the strength and weaknesses of the judges as the courts as they do about baseball players, according to Jesse W. Barrett, one time president of the Missouri Bar association.

VIC ROWLAND NAMED EDITOR FOR EL DON

Vic Rowland, sophomore at Santa Ana Junior college, this morning was announced as editor of El Don, college weekly. John H. McCoy, journalism director, made the appointment.

The new editor will serve for the fall term beginning in September. Rowland has served as circulation manager for this semester.

Others Named

Other appointments made by McCoy include Eleanor Brady, society editor; Oscar Loeffers, feature editor; Bob Warren, circulation manager; and Jack Gardner, sports editor.

Besides working on El Don as circulation manager, Rowland has written a weekly radio column for the paper. He was president of the Associated Students the first semester. He is a member of the Junior Lions, men's service club, and Beta Gamma, extra curricular society, as well as Tavern Tattlers, literary society.

The only staff position yet to be filled is that of advertising manager. This will be filled soon, according to McCoy.

Wine Recognition

El Don has made an enviable record among junior college and college publications the past year in the United States. It recently won national recognition under the editorship of Bob Swanson.

This year has been the first in which an editor has held the position for the two semesters. This is what Swanson has done. During the summer Swanson is slated to work on the Orange Daily News as reporter.

Staff members who have served on El Don this year were Swanson, editor; Frances Was and Dorothy Grisest, society editors; Ray Foster and Franklin Guthrie, sports editor; Rowland, circulation manager; and Harvey Baker, advertising manager.

"BIG SHOT" IN CHECK CASES NABBED TODAY

"No. 55778 from San Quentin," "big shot" fictitious check passer, wanted here for alleged passing of fraudulent checks at Vandermast's, J. C. Penney's and Karl's shoe store, is in custody of San Francisco police, Assistant Chief Harry Fink said today.

The man, A. B. Cummins, 50, used J. B. Fish, A. L. Cullins and many other aliases, according to his long record which shows on police blotters throughout California, according to teletype messages to local officers.

Because Fresno police and police from other cities also want Cummins, probably he never will be brought here for prosecution, Officer Fink said. Most recent alleged offenses here, occurred in March. Cummins also passed a fictitious check at J. C. Penney's here in 1934, police said. Checks passed here recently amounted to $23.

king," until the newlyweds raised the blinds of their compartment for the first time during the trip and smilingly appeared at a window.

The duke and duchess went to the motor boat with Napier down the grand canal under a blue Venetian sky. Police motor boats followed them closely.

Hundreds flocked to the canal's sides and bridges, applauding and shouting "Viva I Duchi".

They appeared on the central balcony in response to the roars of the crowd. Both lifted their hands in salute, smiling and nodding.

WALLIS BLUE BUDOIR AWAITS DUKES' BRIDE

ARNOLDSTEIN, Austria, June 4. (UP)—A Wallis blue budoir awaited the Duchess of Windsor today at old Wasserleoburg castle where she and the duke were expected late tonight on their honeymoon.

Wallis blue wall paper and Wallis blue coverings for the birchwood furniture were given a final inspection today as workmen left the estate after renovating the castle and re-doing the gardens.

The white curtained French windows of the budoir look out across the swimming pool, its numerous cracked tiles replaced, and down a beautiful valley.

Paintings which had been on the wall were removed in favor of the wall paper and a profusion of roses in all tints.

The castle is but five miles from the Italian frontier.

Begin in the 13th century and rebuilt in the 16th century, the castle faces the rough bare peaks of the Julian alps while at the rear is the Gail valley with its peaceful villages embedded in green foliage.

There are 14 individual suites of sitting room, bedroom and bath in the honeymoon nest in addition to the general living quarters.

U. S. APPROVAL ON PRORATION PART OF PACT

Voluntary proration of California Valencia oranges, with the approval of the federal government, was the program laid out today following a joint meeting of the distributors and growers advisory committee of the California-Arizona Orange Grapefruit agency in Los Angeles yesterday.

Much of the information concerning the plan was brought back to the Orange county area by A. H. Kirschmann, of Anaheim, and others who attended the conclave. Kirschmann is manager of the Central Orange County Citrus Exchange and a member of the distributors and growers committee.

Unanimous Decision

The committee's decision was unanimous following indication that the federal department of agriculture likely would suspend the fixing of weekly allotments owing to the rise of prices above parity. Prorates were set for next week as usual and were submitted to Washington for approval.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace intimated that he was not permitted to enforce regulation of shipments of the short crop and in the face of the higher prices due to last January's freeze. However, government representatives at the meeting expressed themselves as in full accord with the committee's decision to continue, proration on a voluntary basis and announced that continuation of the remainder of the marketing program would be carried on as heretofore. Crops will be estimated and shipment records maintained, the committee having voted to levy the usual assessments for this purpose.

Expense Cited

It was decided to reduce expenses for the balance of the current season so far as was consistent with maintenance of the organization and its records in anticipation that the regular proration plan would be in force again in the fall.

Members of the committee pointed out that, from the growers' viewpoint, higher prices in many instances have not offset the additional expense of heating groves and segregating damaged fruit in packing houses. They also declared that experience had proved the value of regulated shipments, even when there was no surplus in the market, since the prorate system maintained trade confidence, assured essential supplies for consumers throughout the season and improved the average return to producers.

A fossilized, prehistoric dragonfly, two and a half feet long, was unearthed near Elmo, Kan., in 1935. There are 365,242 1/2 days in a year. Even this figure is not quite exact, however, for the ratio never can be expressed absolutely, no matter how many figures we carry it beyond the decimal point.

Establishment Of U. S. Peace Bureau Urged

ACTION TAKEN BY AUXILIARY OF LOCAL POST

Establishment of a national Bureau of Peace Education for the dissemination of authentic information through school channels, today was urged by members of the auxiliary of Ernest L. Kellogg Post No. 1680, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Women of the Santa Ana organization yesterday adopted a resolution urging establishment of such a bureau and will forward it to their department president for presentation at the state convention of the auxiliary.

The plan for establishing the bureau was presented to the auxiliary by Mrs. Janie Kelsey who pointed out that while various organizations of war veterans sponsor essay contests in the schools on the subject of peace, much of the material available to students for preparation of essays neither is adequate, nor authentic.

The purpose of the bureau, she said, would be to provide authentic peace information to all who want it.

In the resolution adopted by the Santa Ana auxiliary, it was recommended that the bureau be established to "function under the office of education through which authentic peace information can be disseminated to all people."

In presenting the proposal to the state convention, the Santa Ana auxiliary will recommend that it be presented at the national convention of the organization for action as a national objective of the organization.

Classes Feted At Banquet

GARDEN GROVE, June 4.—Members of the seventh grade of the Alamitos school entertained the graduating class with a banquet in the Friends church Wednesday evening. Tables were decorated with blue and white streamers, the class colors, and the hall decorated with flowers in the same hues.

Assisting with the banquet and serving were Mrs. Marie L. Hare, Mrs. Anna C. Campbell, teachers of the school, Mrs. Mary Rez, Miss Ernestine Wakeham and her guest, Miss Dorothy Muir, of San Francisco.

Members of the eighth grade present were Jean Meyer, Betty Mitchell, Nellie Alvarado, Elko Takahashi and Warren Hill; while those of the seventh grade were J. W. Bowman, Dahl Wakeham, Norma Froese, Lois Moore, Charles Everett, Junior West and Vernon Rez.

M'COY DRUG STORE PLANS SALE EVENT

Women who have used Helena Rubinstein's fine cosmetics, particularly her Novena night cream, will be thrilled at the news of a seven day selling event to be held at the McCoy drug store at the corner of Fourth street and Broadway.

This value which offered once a year begins tomorrow and continues until June 12, when the Novena night cream will be sold at special prices.

According to Miss Dorothy O'Donnell, beauty consultant at McCoy's, this brilliant Rubinstein product was created to counteract during the average seven hours of sleep, the ravages wrought on the skin by worry, weather and today's hectic pace during the seventeen waking hours.

Miss O'Donnell who is in charge of the cosmetic department of the store said McCoy's at Fourth and Broadway probably is the only store in Orange county that handles the complete line of Helena Rubinstein.

Novena night cream is based on rare balsamic oils used in the famous Youthifying Eastern Oil treatment which is given in Helena Rubinstein's famous metropolitan salons and is perfect for modern "high-tension" skins.

Sacramento Thief Takes Police Car

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 4.—(UP)—Police Chief Austin J. Roche glanced over the auto theft reports and found one which made him irate.

"It may be somebody who thinks he is funny," the chief roared. "Well, it isn't funny and I'd like to get my hands on whoever did it."

Constable Del Cann phoned from Elk Grove to report discovery of a brand new sedan abandoned near there.

It was a Sacramento police department car. To make matters worse, it was one assigned to the major crime squad, the department's super-sleuths.

Oddities In Today's News Items

DALLAS, Tex., June 4.—(UP)—The judge complained that sparrows zipped past him in the courtroom. The jury complained that insect life in the county courthouse was being transferred to persons from pigeons. T. P. Williams, court-house superintendent, declared war. He requisitioned the county for an air rifle and BB's to rid the building of a flock of pigeons and hundreds of sparrows.

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—(UP)—The world's softest job went today to Marilyn Stuart, 17, and blonde.

A judge approved her contract for speaking one line two times during a weekly radio program. The line was: "Oh, mamma, that man's here again." For that she gets $50 weekly.

DALLAS, Tex., June 4.—(UP)—Marvin Clevering, 24, died a minute or two before midnight Wednesday night of gunshot wounds. Today it was disclosed that had he lived past midnight, $2000 worth of insurance would have lapsed. A youth was charged with the slaying.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 4.—(UP)—The school board refused to restore a day's pay to a teacher who stayed away from his work while his wife was having a baby. Said Board Member Ira Gardner: "If I worked for a guy who would do me under those conditions, I'd either whip him or get whipped." The board reconsidered, restored the pay.

Honeybees prefer blue flowers, while night-flying moths choose white, possibly because it is seen easily in the dark.

MAN UNWITTINGLY CAUSES TROUBLE RUN

W. M. Crane, 602 South Cypress, may not realize it today, but he started "double trouble" yesterday, according to reports to City Engineer J. L. McBride and Santa Ana police, as he walked in the street in front of 516 South Main.

A motorist nearly ran over Crane but swerved in time to save him, George E. Brown, truck operator for the Santa Ana Tent and Awning company, told city engineering department officials before Detective Sergeant Hunter Leach was called to investigate.

The motorist, s... Brown, ran into a flag holder placed along a newly painted white line, in avoiding Crane; the flag holder was hurled into a parked car; Brown, in his truck, then ran over the holder, puncturing a tire. A woman at 516 South Main reported she had seen Crane walking in the street before and had expected him to be run down by cars. He was to be warned of his danger, today, officers said.

ST. LOUIS LANDMARK RAZED

ST. LOUIS (UP) — Anschutz Mission Inn, successor to the famous century-old Weizenecker's Wine Garden, went under the wrecker's hammer her to make way for a parking lot and eventually a commercial building. Included in the property was the 100-year-old Weizenecker mansion.

SHEEPHERDERS AID FLIERS

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (UP) — The art of sheepherding, old as it is, occasionally can be of benefit to the newer art of flying. Recently two airplanes circled helplessly over the Klamath Falls airport, unable to land. Sheepherders fixed that. They chased a flock of sheep off the runway so the hapless fliers could return to earth.

NATION-WIDE INTEREST GAINED BY CHARTS OF LOCAL SAVANT

Edward M. Nealley's novel method of illustrating his psychology and philosophy lectures at Santa Ana Junior college with upwards of 1,000 charts, gained national publicity this month when he was featured in a nationally syndicated cartoon.

The cartoon, pictured above, was released by the Associated Collegiate Press that supplies feature material for more than 300 college newspapers throughout the United States.

Takes Suggestion

Artist Norman Lea got his idea for the cartoon from a cut printed in the El Don alumni edition published in conjunction with The Register on December 3, of last year.

Nealley started making his diagrams 35 years ago when he read a suggestion by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, former president of Harvard university who said:

"Unless a student's diagram of the facts in his possession, he doesn't know his subject."

Today Nealley's charts occupy one room of his home near Tustin. He has them in 100 stacks of 10 charts each. An elaborate index system makes it easy to find a definite subject at a moment's notice.

CANADA ENJOYS FARM UPSWING

OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—Canadian farmers are emerging from a seven-year depression that almost ruined many of them.

The return of better times to the agriculturists, the country's greatest wealth producers, is seen in the increase in sales of horses, tractors and other farm implements. The rise is taken as a sign that farmers, after curbing crops and expenditures for seven years because of drought conditions and lack of markets, are preparing to stage a "comeback."

The increasing prominence the horse is once again playing as a provider of power of farms is the most surprising development. The department of Agriculture reports that more horses are being put to work on farms every year, despite the increased use of tractors. At the same time the export demand for horses, particularly from Great Britain and the United States is increasing, and prices are mounting rapidly.

During the 10 years 1925-35, because of the increasing popularity of tractors, Canada's horse population dropped by nearly 500,000 to 3,388,000 head. It appeared that the horse was doomed to gradual extinction. During the depression, however, many farmers discovered that it was cheaper to buy and feed horses than to operate tractors, and the demand gradually began increasing again.

The department of Agriculture does not consider the tractor a menace to horses any longer.

"The situation of the horse breeder in Canada for the next eight or 10 years is definitely bright," one official declared. "Breeding has been increased heavily last year and this year and every stallion is in demand."

Western Canada farm implement dealers report that prevailing high prices for wheat and optimistic crop conditions have led to a buying wave in farm machinery. The implement business in the west has been in slump since 1929 because of poor grain prices, drought and general economic instability.

Implement company officials declare that sales, particularly of tractors, during the first four months of this year have been from 25 to 50 per cent greater than last year, and more farmers are paying cash.

IMPROVEMENTS AT TREESWEET SOON TO BE COMPLETED

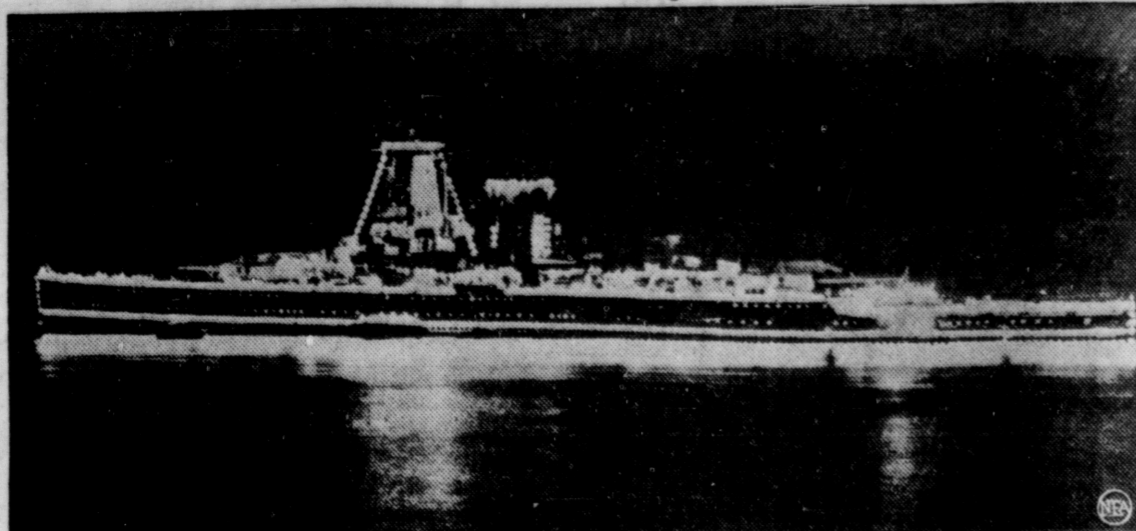

Improvement and enlargement of the Treesweet Products Company plant at 1060 East Fourth street are nearing completion, according to H. L. Manker, manager of the concern.

The improvement program, which includes an ultra-modern office building and the installation of new machinery, was planned to be completed before the summer production season started. Manker said that production will get underway within a few weeks. Included in the new machinery, the plant is the largest Howe fruit weighing machine in the country.

The improvement and enlargement program just being completed is in line with similar improvements that have marked the three years since Treesweet Products company opened a plant in this city for the manufacture of citrus by-products utilizing the fruit surplus that cannot go into the market, Manker said.

A Brilliant Nazi Idea—Warship Outlined by Lights

Quadruplets In Alumni Parade

HOLLIS, Okla., June 4.—(UP)—The Keys sisters, oldest living quadruplets in the world, today celebrated their 22nd birthday by marching in their high school alumni parade.

The sisters—Mona, Mary, Leota and Roberta—occupied an honored place in the parade, seated on a float which they help design.

The sisters were graduated Monday from Baylor university at Waco, Texas. They are considering making personal appearances on the stage this summer.

"It's mighty nice to be back home again," Mary said. "We feel this is the beginning of a new chapter for us. Our school days are over. Now we try new fields."

BAY AREA SHAKEN BY FLIGHT BOMBS

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—(UP)—The San Francisco bay area shook last night with reverberations from the explosion of flight bombs dropped by U. S. army fliers to test efficiency of night photographic equipment.

The bombs, producing a light estimated at 50,000,000 candle power, momentarily lighted the Yerba Buena island area as bright as day while the planes with observers and photographers aboard droned overhead.

The sound of the exploding bombs startled thousands of citizens who feared there had been a serious blast.

U. S. TO ALLOT SHIP SUBSIDIES OF 450 MILLION

BY C. L. SULZBERGER

United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the U. S. Maritime Commission believes that the new Federal agency will be able to settle claims for $450,000,000 by American ship-owners by June 30 without need for requesting further funds from the treasury.

Kennedy said the commission, by a series of negotiations with the heads of the shipping companies, had entered into arrangements to pay off the claims which arise from cancellation of mail contracts under the 1936 Merchant Marine act.

The contracts will be replaced with the new operating differential subsidies formulated under the law. Kennedy said he expected a large part of the settlement would be effected by substitution of subsidy allotments.

"One thing is certain," the former Securities and Exchange Commission chairman said, "with the money we now have we will be able to put up sufficient cash. We are conducting an audit of our books now."

Cuberty Deadline July 1
Kennedy, who was instrumental in starting the machinery of New Deal securities regulation, was drafted by President Roosevelt to initiate sweeping reforms in marine administration. He has until July 1 to substitute the complex subsidy structure for existing ocean mail contracts.

The tall, broad-shouldered business man outlined the objectives of his drive to give American shipping a "shot in the arm." They included:

1—Study of present trade routes with a view to realigning them to "stress those which will do this country the most good and under which the steamship lines will best prosper."

2—Thorough analysis of the condition of the American merchant marine with accent upon its financial status and its possible use as a military auxiliary in times of war.

3—Study of labor conditions in American shipyards and merchant crews in order to adjust subsidy bases to foreign living scales.

4—Examination of the powers of the government in settlement of labor strife. This is now being conducted by a special labor relations department recently created by Kennedy.

5—Analysis of commission authority over air commerce. This will be included in a report to the next Congress and will cover both heavier-than-air and dirigible transportation.

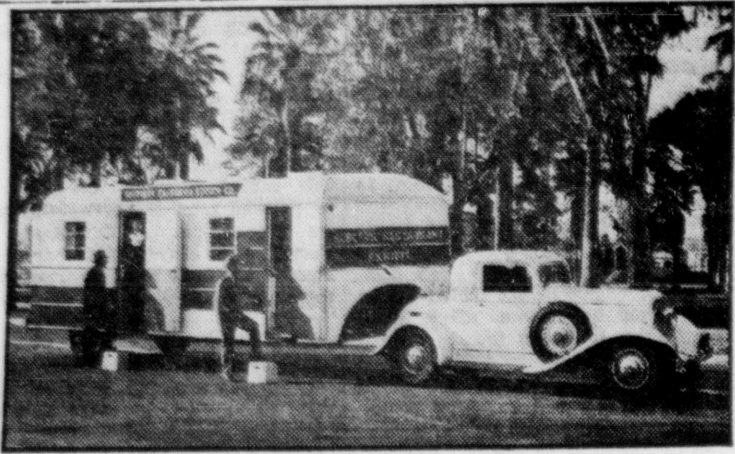

May Seek Labor Act
Kennedy indicated that the commission at some future date "might" request congress to enact legislation giving it authority over maritime labor similar to that enjoyed by the National Mediation Board over carrier workers, under the Railway Labor act.

"The whole thing is a vast job," he said, "larger than any I ever had in private business. The time limitation makes it tough. The law provides that we can't handle any mail pay after June 30. If we don't do something—and do it fast—we are all washed up."

The major shippers have been in to see me in conferences every day for the past several weeks.

TRAVELING "COOKER" ON WAY

Below is a photograph of the huge traveling exhibit of electric equipment for safe cooking that will arrive in Santa Ana next Friday. It will present a display here under direction of R. E. Bacon, division manager for the Southern California Edison company.

SPARKLING ARRAY OF DEVICES FOR CHEFS TO BE DISPLAYED

A large traveling exhibit of electric equipment for restaurant cooking will be in Santa Ana Tuesday to Friday, June 8 to 11, inclusive, according to R. E. Bacon, division manager for the Southern California Edison Company under whose auspices it will be shown.

A comprehensive array of latest type electric equipment for commercial cooking will be shown, including high speed electric ranges, electric ovens, broilers, deep fry kettles, toasters, waffle makers, stock kettles and coffee makers.

Heat Control
A new food warming table will be a special feature of the exhibit. Eliminating many disadvantages of the steam table, each compartment has individual heat control, making it possible for the first time to hold various foods at different temperatures simultaneously.

"This unique traveling exhibit has been arranged by the Edison Company to meet the increasing interest in modern electric equipment," Bauer said. "It has attracted great attention wherever it has been shown and restaurant men in this area are invited to visit it during its stay here."

SPOTTED FEVER WANES
HAMILTON, Mont. (UP)—Spotted fever is rapidly being stamped out in the Bitter Root valley as a result of WPA projects in Ravalli county. Six new dipping vats were erected to replace the old, dilapidated ones. The vats, built last summer and fall, were put to wide use this spring.

Our own staff is working day and night. "I have no intimation yet as to how we will proceed in the future or what recommendations we may make to congress. My ideas change constantly. One thing is sure—we have to learn to swim—just a few strokes at a time—before we can make any predictions."

"American shipping has fallen into an intolerable state. The President said 'Let's stop fooling ourselves about this mail pay' and we have entered into a frank subsidy arrangement. It is a necessary thing—every other country is doing it."

"And there is a growing and tremendous need for merchant shipping. Our trade policies as well as international rearmament have necessitated the use of more bottoms."

"We are asking all the shipping companies to help us work out our plans—and they have been very cooperative."

IDLE MEN WIN SELF SUPPORT IN TINY CO-OP

BY G. FREDERICK MULLEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(UP)—

Two years ago a former officer in the Salvation Army, told by physicians that he had only a few more months in which to live, accepted the suggestion of a friend that he find something to occupy his mind. As a result, he founded an association which has fostered co-operative enterprise among a group of married men who sought a way to get off the charity rolls. Daniel Young Stewart for 17 years was with the Salvation Army and amassed considerable experience in the order's administrative affairs. In 1931, a driver struck Stewart, who was changing a tire on his own car, and the man suffered a serious skull injury.

For two years he fought for recovery and was reasonably successful, although doctors gave him but little hope for long life. A New Haven attorney, Nelson Harris, in 1934 suggested to Stewart that some form of enterprise that might occupy his mind would give him comfort and the moral stimulant that might be necessary to keep him alive.

Small Capital Needed
Stewart, now 61, knowing him own capabilities in administering to the needs of the unfortunate, decided that there were many men of 45 years or older, married and with children, who might be seeking escape from relief rolls. After considerable thought and study, he reasoned that with modest capital, a group of willing workers and the co-operation of residents of the city, these men could earn a decent living.

As a result, Stewart, with the sympathetic aid of Harris, drew his plans and founded the Evening Home for the Aged.

When the organization began to operate, Stewart felt that the true purpose of the association was not apparent in its name and so was born the Unemployed Married Men's Social Service Association, Inc.

Gather Old Newspapers
With 30 men now co-operating in the plan, Stewart has been able to provide for them a fairly decent living. A number of them go out with horses and wagons—the association can't afford as yet the luxury of a motorized conveyance—and pick up old newspapers, rags and pieces of furniture.

Newspapers and rags are baled by others in the co-operative and then sold and shipped to factories to be made over into cheap paper. The articles of furniture are sold to poor families, who cannot afford to buy new pieces. Such articles are repaired or repainted by another group of the association's membership.

All profits accruing to the association, which is chartered by the state as a corporation without capital stock, are evenly apportioned among the members.

ROAD STUDY UNDERTAKEN
BISMARCK, N. D. (UP)—Future policies of the North Dakota highway department will depend in part, at least, on results of a study now being made of past records of foundations, surfaces and maintenance procedures.

The collar will never be removed and forces the wearer to carry her head proudly high for the rest of her life.

Like his white counterpart, no one notices what the Seminole bridegroom wears.

SEMINOLES TO HOLD FESTIVAL

MIAMI, Fla. (UP)—Orange blossoms soon to garland the heads of countless June brides throughout the country provide too fragile a basis for lasting marital happiness, according to the folklore of Seminole Indians encamped here.

For while their white sisters reflect the beauty of the orange blossom, shy Indian maidens will gain strength and dignity from green corn, honored annually at festivals held during June when the moon is at its most propitious stage. In the Green Corn Court, in ceremonies as ancient as the Everglades, Seminole girls will be joined in wedlock to stalwart young braves. And the marriage is permanent.

Phrased in the inadequate Seminole tongue (the language consists of a few more than 500 words), the ceremony will lack the sonorous roll of the modern marriage service, but it will gain in impressiveness from the grandeur of its surroundings and the sincerity with which vows of lifelong fidelity and obedience are solemnly undertaken.

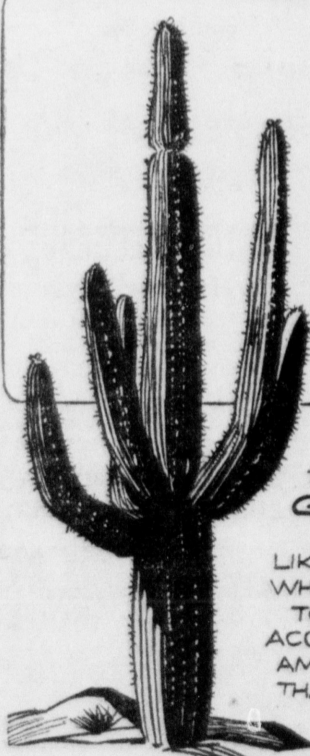

Marrying usually at from 17 to 20 (the Seminoles concur with modern sociologists in considering early marriage vitally important to true happiness) the young couple attach a sanctity to their marital relationship. Divorce, because of the strict and unwavering punishment meted out to philanderers, is virtually unknown—at least on the grounds of infidelity.

The tulle and satin common to more orthodox brides will be missing from the Seminole ceremony, but it will not be lacking in color. Unswayed by fashion vagaries, the Indian brides will wear traditional voluminous skirts made up of row upon row of brilliantly colored vertical strips of cotton sewn together and radiating from a waist band. The waist, made from similar colored strips, is reminiscent of the Gibson Girl's. And, splendor upon splendor, each will wear a neck-hugging collar of vari-colored beads, ranging, according to rank, from a few ounces to several pounds in weight. Stretching from the base of the neck to the chin, the collar will never be removed and forces the wearer to carry her head proudly high for the rest of her life.

Like his white counterpart, no one notices what the Seminole bridegroom wears.

MAYOR BOICE APPOINTED RELIEF HEAD

ORANGE, June 4.—At the regular meeting of executives and the board of directors of the Red Cross Thursday, Mayor A. C. Boice was appointed disaster relief chairman for the city of Orange. Plans were discussed for the disaster relief dinner to be held June 10 in the American Legion hall here. The affair will be county wide, and all city councils, firemen, peace officers, nurses, members of veterans' organizations and anyone interested in relief work after a disaster are invited to attend. Reservations must be made, either with a member of the local Red Cross or Mrs. Laura K. Warren, executive secretary of the Orange County Red Cross.

Richard Newmeyer, special instructor in the swimming and life saving campaign to be conducted here June 14-19 was also present at the meeting, and announced that he hoped many will take advantage of the free swimming instruction which will be given that week in the Orange pool. Harold Terwilliger, national field representative was also present, and met with the life saving committee headed by Fred Hobbs, to complete plans for the instruction, which will be announced later.

It was reported that one advanced class has completed its first aid course recently, and six standard classes are in progress. A new class of American Legion Auxiliary members will meet for the first time Tuesday night. Mrs. E. J. Browne, production chairman, announced that 200 arm bands are made, ready for the use of work-week in the Orange pool. The quote of the chapter on production is almost complete, she added.

Miss Vena Jones, loan closet chairman, said that the local chapter is the only one in the county maintaining a loan closet, which supplies sick room needs to patients who cannot get them for themselves. The wheel chair is in constant use, she said. President Higgins presided, and Mrs. Laura K. Warren Orange County executive secretary was present.

MARRIAGE OF YOUNG PEOPLE UNITES PROMINENT FAMILIES

ORANGE, June 4.—The gleam of white candles burning at the palm-banked altar of St. John's Lutheran church provided a beautiful setting for the 8 o'clock ceremony last night which united in marriage, Miss Ada Schumacher, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schumacher, 1504 East Chapman avenue, and Robert Scharer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto E. Scharer, 2420 Park boulevard, Santa Ana. The pastor of the church, the Rev. A. C. Bode, read the service.

A green and white color theme was emphasized in the decorations for the church. Tall baskets held fragrant white stock, white sweet peas and fern while the white candles were set in tall torches.

The bride, lovely in white satin, entered the church with her father, who gave her in marriage. Her gown was fashioned with a train and her filmy veil held with a wreath of orange blossoms. The veil was finger-tip length and was the traditional "something old," having been worn by the bride's sister, Mrs. Harold Peters (Marie Schumacher) at her wedding two years ago. The bride's bouquet was an arrangement of gardenias centered with a single beautiful orchid.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Peters in an attractive frock of yellow net over flowered taffeta on a pale yellow background. She carried a sheath of Talisman roses. The flower girl, little Beverly Fitcher daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fitcher, wore a miniature replica of the frock of the matron of honor, fashioned of blue net and flowered taffeta on a blue background. John Amling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Amling, wearing a white linen suit and carrying the two golden caskets on a satin pillow, was ring bearer.

Miss Melinda Walker, the bride's cousin, Miss Ruth Scharer, the sister of the bridegroom and Miss Lydia Mueller and Miss Ellen Peters were bridesmaids. All wore similar floor length frocks, quaintly fashioned with puffed sleeves and with varying colors in the clusters of flowers on backgrounds of crisp white taffeta. Their bouquets were of stocks in delicate tints which reflected the colors of the wedding taffeta they wore.

Clifford Butler was best man and ushers were Fred Krohe, Albert Schumacher, Carl Schumacher Jr. and Harold Peters. Mrs. Schumacher, mother of the bride, wore blue sheer with a corsage of white gardenias and white sweetpeas. Mrs. Scharer was in blue lace with which she wore a similar corsage.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Clara Fitcher sang "O Promise Me" and "Jesus Still Lead On," with Miss Marie Fitcher as her accompanist. The latter gave a program of organ solos and played the processional and recessional.

Following the ceremony dinner was served at the Walker Memorial hall and a reception followed. More than 100 guests were bidden and the color theme of the church decorations was repeated in table appointments. White sweetpeas, white baby breath, white candles and green fern were used. The bride's table was centered with a wedding cake iced in white and topped by a small bride and bridegroom standing at a miniature altar. Nut baskets were white and white wedding bells were tied to the handles with white tulle bows.

Alvin Klaustermeyer served as toastmaster and short talks were made by the Rev. A. C. Bode and the Rev. Kenneth L. Ahl. Carol Jean Harms and Charles Harms sang several duets. Miss Clara Fitcher sang "The Sweetest Story Ever

Mrs. Gunther died early Monday at her home, 235 South Olive street, having lived in Orange for 35 years.

The Rev. A. G. Webbeking conducted the services, which were marked by beautiful floral offerings, one especially, worthy of note, was a cross eight feet high, made of white sweet peas and rosebuds.

With E. T. Pingel at the pipe organ, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Kietke sang a duet, "How Blessed Am I." Pall bearers were Lorenz Bandick, J. Vernon Bandick, Walter Gunther, O. Richard Gunther, Loren Gunther and Albert Bosch. Burial was made in St. John's Lutheran cemetery.

Orange Lions Hear Talk By Farm Official

ORANGE, June 4.—In behalf of the extension service of the University of California and the combined committees of the Orange County Farm Bureau, which worked together in the recent Orange county agricultural conference held on February 22 and 23 at the offices of the Orange County Farm Bureau in Santa Ana, E. E. Campbell, head of one of the committees of the Farm Bureau, spoke to members of the Orange Lion's club at this week's meeting at the American Legion hall. Frank F. Mead Jr., program chairman, introduced the speaker and President Wilbur Lentz, presided at the meeting.

Campbell stated, in his report of the economic conference, that the reclamation of urban waste water was left to the judgment of the board of water supervisors. In Orange county, soil fertility is greatly impaired and deteriorating, Campbell said, and that field crops and crop rotation could not be carried on to the greatest advantage without soil fertility. This matter of paramount importance is the largest factor in the work of the agriculturists at the present time.

President Lentz announced that the tentative date set for the Lions club installation ceremonies was the night of June 30. County council officers of Lions clubs will meet in Orange on June 15 at the American Legion hall. Members of the local club who signified their intention of attending the fourth district convention of Lions clubs in Santa Monica from June 16, 17, 18 and 19, inclusively, were Messrs. Forest Talmadge, Ray Arguello, Wilbur Lentz, Gordon Z. Richmond and James E. Donegan.

SIGN SACRAMENTO LABOR AGREEMENT

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 4. — (UP)—An agreement recognizing an American Federation of Labor canner workers' union as bargaining agent for more than 7,000 employees of Sacramento plants today appeared to have headed off all possibility of labor difficulties in this area during the 1937 harvest season.

The agreement was drawn at a mediation conference which followed a short-lived strike yesterday. It was accepted by workers. Highlights of the agreement will permit two stewards to conduct a unionization campaign in the plants up to midnight June 10. It provides that union officers and a negotiating committee shall be elected June 15, officers to be chosen by secret ballot under supervision of the Sacramento Federated Trades council and the State Federation of Labor. Subsequent negotiations shall be concluded by July 15, with wages therein agreed upon to be retroactive to June 15.

Yesterday's strike, involving 300 of the 1,900 workers at one of the California Packing company's Del Monte plants, resulted in a minor

Extermination Experiment Believed Success

SMELTZER, June 4.—Local lima bean ranchers, who last year tried an experiment of killing out the morning glories on their land by a new method, report that about 75 per cent of the vines were eradicated. A sodium arsenic solution was used in the experiment and will be tried again this year. Vernon Heil, one of the extensive growers who used the method on his large acreage where the plant was running riot, gives as his opinion that the treatment should be given in dry weather and no irrigation used at the time. In last year's tryout the land was first irrigated, with the idea that the plants would absorb the solution more readily.

The continued cloudy weather has brought on quite an influx of wire worms in the bean fields and the plants are now suffering as a result.

THE RETREAT FROM GETTYSBURG

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Memorial Day, 1937, finds the victorious North in full retreat from Gettysburg and all that it implies. For the election of 1936 marked the end of Civil War politics in the United States and a return to the issues which that war failed to settle.

It is usual for editors and columnists to have an inspirational article ready for publication in advance of such a day as this. It is easy to write in advance. All you need is a little picturesque patriotism, a little plucking on the heart-strings, a little parading of the tattered old battle-flags, with perhaps a moral drawn from the past to warn the present generation. This time it seemed wiser to wait.

And now comes word of a general flagging of interest in our soldier dead. The Grand Army of the Republic and the Confederate Veterans have nearly all answered the last roll-call. The World War is out of favor as a national epic. It cost us too much money, too few lives, and for too obscure reasons, to rate with the Civil War. The less said about the Spanish-American War the better and now we are compelled to acknowledge that the Civil War itself was largely a mistake.

For example, there is no sadder figure in our national life than the Southerner who has, two generations after Appomattox, accepted in good faith the finality of the Northern victory. He has turned his back upon the South and its philosophy and has become a Carter Glass or a Cotton Ed Smith—an apologist for Wall Street and big banking control, an advocate of speculation and exploitation, an embarrassingly zealous convert to the shoddy values of get-rich-quick industrialism.

And there is no more laughable figure in our national life than the Northern Tory who has, after three generations of economic royalism by grace of the National Banking Act, the Fourteenth Amendment and the supreme court, suddenly taken refuge in the hoary doctrine of states rights. He has turned his back upon the fact of Northern victory and has attacked the national power which that victory created, because it has at last been used in a sense which the Union League club never desired or planned.

This is high comedy of a very tragic kind. It means that the nation is flung back to the problem which Gettysburg answered without solving it. The theory of "indestructible States in an indestructible Union" is a mouth-filling but meaningless bit of judicial nonsense. Two irreconcilable concepts cannot exist. Either the Union is supreme or the states are free to modify or withdraw their allegiance to that Union. Gettysburg only proved that it was dangerous for the states to do so but did not proceed to obliterate those states which had made the attempt.

This gave our great business corporations their opportunity. Wrapping themselves in the fiction of state sovereignty but calling upon the federal courts to support them with the new national authority, they became and have ever since remained almost immune to political regulation or social control. The states could create corporations which immediately assumed all the rights, privileges and immunities of private citizens to be free from state or federal interference.

During the first few decades of this process, the economic royalists called upon the courts to protect them from the states. More recently they have called upon the courts to protect them from the nation. With both states and nation united in a program of reform, they are clamoring for a return to the theory of local sovereignty which John C. Calhoun and Jefferson Davis erected for the protection of regional rights and which Sherman, Grant and Lincoln successfully combated.

It is as though when Pickett's Division reeled back from the Union center on that fateful July 3, 1863, and Lee prepared to withdraw from the stricken field, General Meade had sent a messenger with word that the South had won on points and that the Union armies were prepared to surrender to the vanquished.

That is why Memorial Day ain't what it used to be. That is why the crowds no longer turn out to hear United States senators orate and wave the bloody shirt. For each side in our national epic now agrees that the other side really

RAMIREZ IS SAVED BY "LIMITATIONS"

Although he was charged with assault with a deadly weapon, Pedro Ramirez, formerly of Santa Ana, walked out of Justice Kenneth E. Morrison's court a free man yesterday.

More than three years have elapsed since Ramirez is alleged to have stabbed Jesus Hereida with a penknife, following a drunken quarrel. Since Ramirez was not indicted, the statute time limit has run.

Ramirez was brought in by Deputy Sheriff G. F. McKelvey after immigration officers picked him up in the Palo Verde Hills, near San Pedro. Assistant District Atty. Florence E. Sprague asked for dismissal of the case.

LABOR UNIONS TO BATTLE IN OREGON

PORTLAND, Ore., June 4.—(UP)—Portland next Monday will become the Pacific coast battle ground in the fight between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Two of the largest labor groups of the west, the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, and the "Woodworkers" Federation will meet here Monday, with affiliation with the C.I.O. as the principal question before each organization.

The rival labor groups will send major officers to fire their big guns. John Brophy, C.I.O. director, will direct the siege for John L. Lewis' organization, seconded by Harry Bridges, president of the Pacific Coast International Longshoremen's association.

William Fischer, president of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, already here, said the question will be weighed and voted on by the members in a referendum.

William Hutcheson, president of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, parent A. F. of L. organization of which the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Union is an affiliate, will defend the A. F. of L. at the convention of the woodworkers' federation.

Man Offers Jobs To Test Policy

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 4.—(UP)—E. B. Bridgewater, 43-year-old barber and violinist, submitted himself as a sociological guinea pig to today to stage a one-man test of the federal government's relief policy.

He runs a barber shop and teaches violin on the side, and offered in a newspaper advertisement to give both jobs to some one on relief. He explained he was "worried about the country."

"I want to see if it's possible to get a job. I want to show my sons (he has three) that it will be possible for them to find jobs when they grow up, too, by going out and getting a new one," he said. His offer has not been accepted. "The WPA doesn't seem interested," he admitted.

ENGINEERING IS CLUB SUBJECT FOR EL CAMINO

Engineering and other progress being made in California, formed the general subject matter of speakers at El Camino Club last evening.

At the table topic members expressed opinions of what might be done to make Santa Ana a more progressive city, ideas being some of what evenly divided between a new junior high school, a city park, and a civic spirit which might promote more team work. The need of an assembly hall for Julia Lathrop Junior high also was cited as a need.

Tells of "Eye"

The All-American canal, characterized as an artificial river in size, was described by T. D. MacBird, who illustrated the size of the project as well as its importance. Ralph Taft followed with a description of the Metropolitan Aqueduct.

The importance of California agriculture, with figures showing the value of various crops, was presented by A. O. Hatfield. Hubert Gohres told of the huge "eye" to be set on top of Palomar and of what will become visible through it.

Malcolm Macura, who was awarded first place, related problems of the Golden Gate bridge, just opened, and how these problems were solved. Raft won second place, Gohres, third. Ernest Wooster was toastmaster of the evening, critics Phil Hood, Dr. C. J. Ruley, Robert Farrar, Glenn Wooley, Glenn Tidball, and Dr. M. W. Hollingsworth, the latter general critic.

Revival Services To Close Sunday

The revival services which have been conducted by Evangelist W. I. Kelley of San Pedro, for the past three weeks at the Full Gospel Assembly, comes to a close Sunday night. Great interest has prevailed throughout.

There will be a double baptismal service at 7:45 p.m. today. The Rev. Ballard, Fullerton pastor, will bring a group from his church who will participate in this service. The location of the church is 1600 West Third street.

Wife McAdoo Jr. Granted Divorce

RIVERSIDE, Cal., June 4.—(UP)—Mrs. Molly Taskaberry McAdoo today was granted a final decree of divorce from William Gibbs McAdoo Jr., son of the junior United States senator from California.

Mrs. McAdoo's interlocutory decree was allowed in May of last year by Judge O. K. Morton on grounds of failure to provide.

Mole Hill Is Mountain; Mole Caught

Mrs. Roy C. Browning, Main and Pacific streets, Tustin, has made a mountain out of a mole hill, according to information given California highway patrol officers today. She didn't mean to do so.

Reporting a burglar at her home, she asked sudden assistance of Officer Ben Craig. Craig accompanied. Highway Officer Herman Lenz and Police Chief John Stanton of Tustin rendered invaluable service to Craig. They assisted in capturing the burglar, found disturbing the peace at Mrs. Browning's home. And today, Horace Inge, highway patrolman, is arranging an arraignment for the "desperado." Craig admitted he was willing to sign a complaint.

The "burglar" is a mole, now held at the highway patrol office in a fruit jar. Bail is set at $10,000 or thereabouts.

Townsend Topics By W. F. Rockwell

(Editor's Note: The comment and opinions of W. F. Rockwell, as appearing in this column are not necessarily those of The Register.)

Hi-Mucky-Muck. Mostly muck. There seems to be a trait in some folks to assume the "holier-than-thou" superior attitude toward some other folks, and an aping of powerful people. This phase of human nature is the basis of autocracy or plutocracy versus democracy. Alexander Hamilton belonged to the self-named "chosen few," while Thomas Jefferson favored the common people of whom Abraham Lincoln said were God's loved ones because He made so many of them. Well, when it's all boiled down to six feet under ground, all that remains is what permanent value resulted in lives when above ground.

There is no doubt that the club No. 1 meeting in Orange Monday June 7 will be well worth attending, because H. G. Wilcox, who worked with Arthur L. Johnson in Washington, D.C., on the "General Welfare Act of 1937," H.R. 4199, will be the guest speaker. This is an unusual opportunity.

It appears that the "upper crust," mostly crust, feels above the Townsend plan, and will not take the trouble to give it the careful, thorough study necessary to realize its far reaching benefits to everybody, including themselves. But the multitude of common people have votes that count in this democratic government, and as there Townsend votes are rapidly increasing, it is plainly evident that their power will be recognized by the adoption of the Townsend plan, "The General Welfare Act of 1937," H.R. 4199.

Some people can't get over and above harping on the political errors made by Dr. Townsend. Such people seem unable to realize that politicians have an unsavory reputation and that Dr. Townsend is not a politician and is, by nature, so why fill up the atmosphere with a little personal ideas instead of looking only to the desired goal—the welfare of all—and cut out all this foolish worry over differences of opinion. You might as well saddle the big burden of running this whole country as to think about changing the thoughts and actions of such strong characters as Dr. Townsend. Better tackle someone your own size. Better still, just "forget it" and get behind Dr. Townsend with your whole heart and soul. Then you will stand a show of getting somewhere.

Club No. 11 meets tonight, 7:30 o'clock, at 1512 West Fourth street. A program consisting of home talent will be enjoyed. Everyone welcome.

Remember the important meeting of club No. 7 tonight in the Christian church at corner of Orange avenue and McFadden street.

Don't forget the club No. 10 meeting tonight at 602 East Sixth street, corner of Sixth and Minter streets.

It is estimated that the attendance at the bazaar was about 5000 and the "intake" about $1000. Not bad. The clubs that did not take their part in this splendid enterprise can now see what they missed by staying out. There is so much enthusiasm over the outcome that another bazaar is being considered, to be held about December first and plans are being made for that event.

WHAT REFRIGERATOR HAS THE LOWEST 10-YEAR COST?

THE U. S. PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION WANTED TO KNOW and here's what they did about it

When PWA's Housing Division studied food-keeping economy for the future residents of their low-rent housing projects, they made a discovery. They found that electric refrigeration was the lowest cost food-keeping they could buy, in a majority of their projects.

To pick the most economical electric refrigerator, for 16,697 dwellings in 34 of these projects, they asked for bids from leading manufacturers—not on price alone, but initial price PLUS ten-year cost of electricity. Westinghouse won this contract, showed the lowest 10-year cost of them all. It's 10-year Economy that counts!

"WE use Pennsylvania Tires—know there are none better—and our Customers Say the Same"

General Hugh S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is a putrescent mess in the C. C. C. Some reserve officers of the U. S. Army who command some C. C. C. companies and camps are on what, in labor disputes, we call a sit-down strike and what, in the Army, we call disobedience of orders and mutiny. These, in military law, are capital offenses. That is just how serious it is.

The World War upset two old beliefs. One was that it takes more than one year's intensive training to make a civilian into a soldier. The other was that an intelligent nation can afford to entrust the lives and health of bodies of men in modern war to officers who have more training than the men themselves.

The war demonstrated that with scientific, properly planned training, a recruit can become an acceptable soldier in a few months, but that the training of officers requires a much more thorough education. To provide for this, Congress authorized a great corps of reserve officers—civilians who by military education in colleges and training camps have fitted themselves to command.

After examination, they are given commissions on an inactive list—subject, however, to be called to active duty. Until that happens they are civilians. When it happens they are soldiers in military service, entitled to all the benefits of pay, quarters and other perquisites, and subject to all the burdens of Regular Army officers. Among the latter is subjection to military law, the first principle of which is obedience to orders and "their's not to question why." On this principle the whole defensive system of the nation rests.

When C. C. C. came along there was a demand for military administrators in camps who had been taught how to take care of the lives and health and discipline of single men in barracks. Except for the absence of purely military training, these were exactly the duties of an Army officer. Thousands of Reserve Officers were called to active duty to take care of C. C. C. camps—gave the officers necessary companies. It served a double purpose in administration and command, and protected the men from unfit administration.

But there were nowhere near enough jobs to give all Reserve Officers a crack at this training. So the War Department, after careful study, made an order to rotate the jobs and give every Reserve Officer who wanted it an 18 months' tour of duty. That's where the trouble began.

The incumbents don't want to be rotated. They say they won't be rotated. They are sitting down on the jobs refusing either to budge or to obey orders. They are attempting to pervert the C. C. C. boys to the same mutiny. Their association is strong in Congress and they are demanding much more—incorporation into the Army as permanent Regulars.

Now this just won't do. Civilian liberty is one thing, but when the soldiers of a nation begin to say, "I won't," and each for himself begins to decide which order he will and which he will not honor with his obedience, something very dangerous to the public peace has happened.

There is no warrant at all for this uprising, except the so-called "property of every worker in his job." However that may be in industry, it won't go in military service where the rule is that in St. Matthew, "I say to this man go, and he goeth; and to another, come, and he cometh; and to my servant, do this, and he doeth it."

Ruthless and hard as it may seem, for the sake of the integrity of the United States Army, the leaders of this mutiny should be court-martialed. They are endangering the whole Reserve Corps for if it can't be depended upon to obey orders, one great prop to our defensive system is rotten and should be abolished before it is too late. The Administration can't afford to pussyfoot on this vital question.

Canada Ready To Aid Trade With Belgium

OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—Canada expects to add a trade agreement with Belgium this year to its long list of trade treaties with foreign nations.

Belgium is understood to be ready to enter a trade pact with Canada, but negotiations have been postponed until this summer when the Canadian government leaders return home after the Imperial Conference.

At present Canada has no direct treaty with Belgium and adheres to an agreement between the United Kingdom and Belgium, exchanging "most favored nation" treatment in tariff affairs.

Belgian authorities are seeking a specific agreement like those existing between Canada and the United States and other countries, with each country making concessions on definitely enumerated commodities.

The trade with Belgium is much in favor of Canada. Last year Canadian exports to Belgium rose to $23,000,000 from $9,326,277 in 1935, and imports were $6,137,830 compared with $4,678,296.

The principal products exported by Canada to Belgium include wheat, lumber, basic metals like copper, zinc and lead, wood pulp and rubber tires. Canadian imports consist mainly of glass, iron and steel, fine woolen textiles and artificial silk.

ROWDY FARCE ENDS THEATER SEASON IN N. Y.

BY JACK GAVER
(United Press Drama Editor)

NEW YORK. — The theatrical season of 1936-37 bows out in a blaze of glory with the production by George Abbott of "Room Service," a mad, rowdy farce about show business which ranks well with the writer-director-producer's other laugh-getting gold mines such as "Three Men on a Horse," "Boy Meets Girl" and "Brother Rat."

I do not know what the Abbott secret is, but I refuse to worry about how and why he does it as long as he continues to furnish entertainment capable of provoking loud and frequent snuffaws, with a running fire of chuckles thrown in for good measure. I do know that Mr. Abbott is an extremely astute showman, that he can direct comedy and farce like nobody's business, even to the extent of making a mediocre script seem twice as good as it has any right to seem, and that he has a way with actors, many of whom you may never have heard of before, which makes them seem exactly what the playwright ordered whether they "look the part" or not.

The new arrival, and last of the season is the product of John Murray and Allen Boretz. The play has been kicking around for a couple of years, getting a tryout last season under the Sam Harris banner. It never came to New York, however, and Harris finally let it go to Abbott. Then came rewriting, recasting and the Abbott touch with the present salubrious result.

"Room Service" concerns the trials of a shoestring producer attempting to present a play by a greenhorn playwright from the sticks. He and his cast and helpers are on the cuff in a hotel whose assistant manager puts up with them because he owns a piece of the show. When the hotel manager returns—things begin to happen, with complications developing so rapidly that they have to be seen to be believed—and to be laughed at. Romance, of course, plays a part, but it is never permitted to get in the way of the laughs and the wisecracking, rapid-fire talk which crackles along with scarcely a letup for the three acts.

The cast includes some old Abbott standbys—members of the Abbott stock company as they are known in the trade—among them being Sam Levene, Teddy Hart, Margaret Mullen, Eddie Albert and Betty Field. Others prominently cast are Philip Loeb, Alexander Aero, Donald MacBride and Philip Wood.

There is no use mincing words about "Sea Legs"—it is a bad musical comedy. The comedy takes place aboard a yacht, giving a chance for all kinds of nautical antics by a good dancing cast which is handicapped by poor material. The book and lyrics are by Arthur Swanstrom, who has done much better, and the music is by Michael H. Cleary.

Dorothy Stone, Fred's daughter, and her husband, Chas. Collins, are first rate dancers and the chief attraction of the piece. C here in the cast include Roscoe Ates, Charles King and Walter Greaza. The producers are Albert Bannister and J. Edmund Byrne.

The latest published play is "But For the Grace of God," by Leopold Atlas from the Samuel French presses. This is the fair-to-middling play about city sweatshop and slum conditions produced last winter by the Theater Guild.

The life span of spudrups amounts to four or five times the length of time taken for them to reach maturity.

4 MILES IN 5 ARE STOP-AND-GO

It's the costliest kind of driving you do!

IF YOU WANT to figure out how much gasoline you waste, don't count the miles, count the stops and starts.

One stop can waste enough gasoline to take you a third of a mile . . . and you average 30 stops every day!

To cut down the high cost of stop-and-go driving, Shell engineers developed a way to "balance" gasoline.

By this revolutionary Shell balancing process, the entire chemical structure of gasoline is rearranged. As a result Super-Shell is made "digestible" for the motor in your car, just as cooking makes some foods digestible for you.

When you're starting, shifting, accelerating—at all times—your motor gets the full benefit of Super-Shell's high energy content.

"Motor-digestible" is the best way to describe this gasoline.

There's a Shell dealer in your neighborhood. Stop there next time you need gas.

THE HORSE SHOW

This is the day the column goes berserk, and discusses at minor length the horse show to be held in the Santa Ana Municipal Bowl tomorrow afternoon and night.

To be honest, my knowledge of horses is confined to the bang-tails that throw down you and your money at the race track. But they that know say, without equivocation, this affair won't cost you more than the original investment at the box office; but the dividends will be much and many in pleasure and appreciation of men's (next) best friend.

Here are just a few facts that may interest the chap who never reads before or beyond the last two pages in the first section of The Register, bless his soul!

In the first place, the horse show is sponsored for a worthy cause, charity. The Assistance League is behind it.

There have been other horse shows held in Santa Ana but this is the first that has drawn entries from the leading stables and horsemen of the state.

The Thomas Mearney stables of San Diego and the Crabtree stables also from San Diego, have entered in the various classes, principally the three and five-gaited, polo and hunters touch-and-go.

There will be a polo game between Orange county and Long Beach players who belong to the Polo Club of Long Beach and rated in the American Polo association through the Riviera club of Los Angeles. Eldon Frock, one of Southern California's outstanding polo players and trainers of polo horses will be referee and judge for the contest that will be held during the afternoon show.

There will be competitive drill between women's riding groups including the Lancerettes of Long Beach and the Boot and Spur club from the Meadow Lark riding stables of Long Beach and other similar groups. These young women are uniformed and have been trained not only in horsemanship and cavalry drill.

El Rodeo Riding club will have an entry of at least 25 in the night show. Each of these riders will use silver mounted saddles costing approximately $1500 each, in addition to silver mounted bridles and other equipment.

E. J. Stinson will show one of his hitches of purebred Belgian draft horses and put them through an exhibition of show driving.

Polomino horses those tawny colored horses with white tails and manes, that originated in Mexico and South America will be featured. One of these horses is Barb, a direct descendant of Barb, one of Mexico's greatest palominoes. He will compete with his sire, El Capitan, a consistent show winner.

Monday's Games

7:30—M. E. South vs. Elks; 8:30—Carpenters vs. Commercial National Bank.

Montgomery Ward, the team that came into the Santa Ana City league at the last minute, shot to the head of the pennant-seeking procession today.

The Wardmen defeated the Commercial National bank in the Municipal Bowl last night 5-3 and replaced atop the standings the Santa Ana Elks who were bumped off in the curtain-lifter by last year's champion Grand Central Market, 9-6.

Off to a four-run lead, Montgomery Ward was never in serious trouble except for a Banker spurge in the eighth inning. But the Grand Central Market had to go an extra frame to subdue the belligerent Elks. The Antlered Herd tied the score 6-6 in the last of the seventh when LeRoy Levens poked a home run off "Lefty" Hanson. Joe Ortega came right back in the Market's half of the overtime round with a homer that touched off a three-run rally. Standifer followed with a walk and Partida singled to right, all hands scoring when Dominguez hit the ball dribble through him.

The lead changed hands four times in the early part of the conflict. The Elks scored first but lost the advantage when Levens poked a home run off that it was see-saw.

In the Montgomery Ward-Commercial Bank struggle, Maurice Young put the Wards ahead in the first with a homer after Russ Gundersen singled. Rod Smiley did the same thing in the second after Gene Hitt had hit safely. Big Walt Jordan knew how to make that lead stand up, although he had a shaky moment in the sixth when the Bankers scored twice on blows by Gabe, Erwin Youel and Ojeda. The box score:

Timely Tips on Outdoor Life

BY JED WELSH

Reports from the local lakes remain unchanged from last week, with the exceptions that crappie fishing is better and the bass are beginning to take an interest. The streams are getting lower every week and in about three weeks fly-fishing in Southern California should be fairly good. San Gabriel is fair now and Deep Creek and Bear creek are both very worth while fishing.

Many persons don't seem to know the best way to use their tackle while bait-fishing, so I will take advantage of this opportunity to give a few hints that might help the average angler. Worms should not be baited up in a knot on the hook; neither should they be strung on the hook and killed. The proper way to use a worm is to use a worm-gang hook. This keeps him (or her, how do I know) in a natural position, and alive and wiggle. And in using a worm-gang few strikes are missed.

Now you take salmon-eggs (I'll take vanilla). A salmon-egg should be hooked singly on a hook that is small enough to be almost buried in it. The shortest shanked Eagle Claw hook is good, and the new Red-I salmon-egg hook with red upper shank and eye for camouflage is excellent.

Natural bait, used correctly, is best. The three staple diets of trout are the hellgramite, the stone-fly larva, and the caddis-worm. Stone-fly larva comes early in the season and are found under wet stones wherever the current is not too strong. No. 12 hooks about an inch apart on the end of a leader is the best system. Hellgramites are found from July through September under rocks and in little side trickles of water. They are tough and many fish can be caught on the same one. A long-shanked hook (No. 10 or 12) is good, but I prefer two hooks for them. There is a leader on the market made with two hooks (one inch apart) on the end of a gut, and it is useful for natural bait. Caddis worms, or periwinkles, come in a little shell made of stones and twigs and are in the streams most of the time. They are at their largest late in the summer and fall. Take the worm out of the shell and put three or four of them on a small hook (usually a No. 14 or 12). The smell of these little yellow worms seems almost irresistible to trout and even the big old wise ones fall for it.

Grubs are found in potato patches and pine logs. They are good bait and some fishermen even use them to troll behind a spinner. A short shank round hook is best for them and it should be small enough to bury inside with just the point sticking out.

Grasshoppers are always popular in the summer. If they were as popular with the fish as they are with the fishermen, it would be swell! They are always better if the outer, dull wings are removed first. A long-shanked hook should be run under the breast-plate from the front, then turned point up and put up through the soft abdomen. There are specially made grasshopper hooks that are good if you are sticking to grasshoppers for bait. Do not use a sinker when fishing with them for bait as they should naturally float.

Moths and houseflies are all good baits but they are hard to put on a hook. Here is the super-system for their use: cover the shank of your hook with pine-pitch, then press your bait alive onto the pitch. He can't possibly get off and will stay alive and kicking! Simple, isn't it?

Ocean fishing reports (by Earl Wilcox, the Western Auto Supply company's outdoor reporter):

NEWPORT-BALBOA: Bay fishermen the last few days have been very happy over the catches of croaker and yellowfin they have been making. The recent weather has kept bay fishing only fair.

Live bait boats have been enjoying some excellent fishing the last few days, barracuda, sea bass and yellowtail. A giant black sea bass was taken from the "Sunshine." Barracuda fishing aboard the barge "California" has been exceptionally good lately.

Orange County Night league baseball men wondered today whether Irvine's championship reign was beginning to wane.

The Beaniepickers were boomed out of first place last night when the Lions of Brea "took" them in a spirited, free-hitting battle, 9 to 7.

At the same time the fence-busting Holly Sugar company loomed as a pennant contender by belting out Olive and scoring into a tie with Irvine for second place, only one game behind the undefeated Brea outfit.

Irvine got off in front when Starkey hit a homer in the second after Ray Hapes had singled. Brea made it 3-2 in its half on hits by Collman, Snell and Maxson, and an error. Irvine regained the lead in the third, 4-3. Brea got to Ira DeBusk for four runs and a 7-4 edge in the sixth but Irvine tied it in the eighth when Merle Hapes blasted a home run with two on.

Brea came right back in its half with the two winning runs. Snell went clear to third when Starkey muffed his long fly. Maxson singled Snell across, and Maxson came around on DeBusk's wild throw to first and Donaldson's single.

Holly Sugar scored in every inning but two to trounce Olive, 14 to 6. The contest was never in doubt after Holly marked five times in the first inning on hits by Smith, Salcido, H. Cruz, Kinney and McFarlane, the latter's being a home. Kinney and Martinez also connected for the circuit.

"Jumpin' Joe" Cornelius, the one-horn time National league pitching ace, gave Tustin a 9-7 victory over San Juan Capistrano with a tenth-inning home run that tailed Padias ahead of him. Reyes and Luc contributed homers to Capistrano's cause in the orgy of baseknocks.

Ernie Villaseenor, a junior collegian, pitched the first game of his career as Fullerton mowed down Yorba Linda, 10-2.

'FRENCHY' JURE BEES' PRAYER SAVES FIGHTS FROM FAILURE HURLER HEARD

BY EDDIE WEST

Valiant is the word for "Frenchy" Jure, who single-handed kept the Orange County Athletic club's boxing show from being a dismal failure last night.

The swagging, swashbuckling Redlands lightweight has never been especially popular here; more often than not the house has yelled for his scalp. But when there was a shortage of fighters, and "Frenchy" worked overtime to save Matchmaker George Stewart's program even Jure's hecklers turned to cheer. Some of "em even wished he would do a "triple" and plunge in and rescue a mediocre main event between mustached Raoul Solis and a banjo-eyed Negro over the pseudonym of Baby Kid Buddy. Solis won from Buddy in four rounds in an affray eventful only for the appearance in the ring of Buddy's big, black second who threatened Solis for punching after the bell ended the third round. Buddy needed his second's help to cope with Solis, who was far too good for him. Buddy did raise a "mouse" over Solis' left eye early in the going but that was the extent of his attack. The rest of the time he spent in a state of confused retreat, just trying to avoid Solis.

Jure saved the show. When Matchmaker Stewart counted roses at 8:30 he mustered only 14 boys instead of 16 for his eight bouts. Jure volunteered to fight twice. A Negro named Eddie Gill was persuaded to do likewise. Gill lost both his starts. But cocky "Frenchy Jure" was perfect. He started twice, won both times by a knockout. He ought to get a bonus from the Pomona billiard parlor whose name he wears on the back of the bathrobe he wears into the arena.

The first victim was Gill, who dropped in the fourth round as much from exhaustion as the numerous left hooks Jure pumped into his belly. The second was another Negro, "Pee Wee" Davis, a squat rhapsody in black, who set up a guard something out of a musty record book, tried to make a roughhouse of it and then folded up in the third after two knockdowns. Two unsympathetic dinky seconds climbed into the ring laughing like hyenas and emptied the contents of two water bottles on Davis before Davis emerged from his coma.

Gill, the other "iron" man, lasted less than two rounds with Indian Eddie Moore, after losing to Jure. The O. C. A. C. was treating to the rare spectacle of seeing its honey-child, Barney Reese, take a swell licking in the special. Art Perez dished out a boxing lesson to the Atwood Atom, whose face was a bloody smear in the wire.

B. Jimenez rallied in the last round to outpoint Bob Navarro, an improved youngster from Reese's stable. Navarro had a slight edge going in but was all but knocked out. Lester Bernal stopped Al Higgs in the fourth, and Sal Baca put away Nash Diaz in two. The referee was Freddie Gilmore.

An assault on the 16 meet records began in preliminaries this afternoon. Nine marks—in the hurdles, 480, 580, mile, two mile, high jump, discus and javelin throw—may be too low to survive.

Don't the young men of Gloucester become fishermen?

Well, for the very same reason the young people of California become tennis stars.

Thus, with Miss Canning and young Kovacs coming along, and from it would appear that California will continue to be the capital of the tennis world.

It's only natural, too. The boys and girls out there have every reason to be the best. Not only do they have the ideal weather, but they have the inspiration provided by their champions of yesterday.

Sport Nuggets by John Neubauer

Although Anaheim high school will embark on a new schedule in the newly formed Sunset league, the resumption of the rivalry with Fullerton seems to be the main topic of conversation in the Mother Colony.

It isn't at Fullerton. The Indians are taking the game as a matter of course. Their football league and the traditional Santa Ana-Fullerton game are potatoes enough to worry about.

It's only a passing thought and five months ahead of schedule, but it does look like this here Anaheim bunch and Stewart White's Orange Panthers threaten to rule as the king pins of the newly formed alignment.

Huntington Beach? Can't make the grade. With one of the best setups in recent years, the Beach city contingent folded up after making an impressive start last fall. Neither Excelsior nor Jordan high schools can compete with Anaheim or the top-notchers next year.

The old Orange league, which comprises the smaller schools of the county, is better off with their big brothers in a league by themselves. Competition will be more even. The little fellows can pick on somebody their own size without the fear of crippling their entire squad.

More interesting, too. As it brings four leagues to Orange county, The Santa Ana Saints will bring Citrus Belt league competition to the county seat for the first time; while Fullerton will continue its relations in the Foothill league.

Sports editors already have headaches! They will be required to cover the Orange County, Sunset, Foothill and Citrus Belt league schedules to say nothing of the junior college circuit.

Quite a job. It will make a few extra hours work for someone to cover these games.

Over at Anaheim Dick Glover is stumped. The C. I. E.—which has all the dictatorial powers of the C. I. O.—says no spring football. This is decidedly against the Colsonist policy.

No spring practice. There used to be a time when the senior class game was the highlight of the spring season. The boys had a regular football game and the tutor got a good slant on what he would have the following year.

No more, alas! Glover can only get his athletes out in gym suits for a modified spring practice, which permits only the teaching of elementary fundamentals and is as tame as touch football.

WIDER ATTACK BEGUN AGAINST WHITE PLAGUE

MILWAUKEE—(UP)—The 2,000-year-old battle to whip the white scourge of tuberculosis will receive fresh impetus at the National Tuberculosis Association's 33rd annual convention here May 21 to June 2.

The meeting is expected to attract 1,500 physicians, research scientists, nurses, social workers and laymen to plan a stronger frontal attack against the disease on behalf of its 600,000 victims in the United States. Revitalization of the attack is planned through wider distribution and more general application of knowledge about tuberculosis gleaned through centuries of painstaking study. Eradication of the scourge of generations is believed possible if this knowledge can be applied intensively and consistently, according to experts in the field.

The 50th anniversary of the founding of the first tuberculosis dispensary in the world at Edinburgh, Scotland, by Sir Robert Philip, M. D., also will be observed at the convention. Philip's dispensary is reputed to be the first organized community effort made in the world to free mankind of tuberculosis.

Studies Begun 2,000 Years Ago

Veterans in anti-tuberculosis activity are continuing studies activity to have begun some 2,000 years ago. The aid of laboratory science has been enlisted for some 300 years. But the human family, acting as a community, took up the cudgel in its own behalf only a half-century ago. As evidence of the strides made since that development, scientists cite reports showing reduction of the tuberculosis mortality from 300 deaths per 100,000 population among civilized countries in 1887 to approximately 50 deaths per 100,000 persons at present.

Cost of clinic treatment of the disease in the United States was estimated at between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 annually. Studies indicate regional differences in effect of the disease with the mortality higher among men than women in all parts of the nation except the Mississippi valley and the southern states.

Deaths Gradually Reduced

Nearly 70,000 persons in the United States die annually of tuberculosis, according to reports to be presented at the meeting. The death rate has been lowered from 201 deaths per 10,000 population in 1904 to 55 in 1935. Prevalence of the disease is estimated to entail costs totaling about $750,000,000 annually to the nation. The American Sanatorium Association, representing about 1,200 institutions for treatment of tuberculosis and the National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries will hold meetings at the same time as the National Tuberculosis Association. The secretaries will report on the 1936 sale of Christmas seals from which more than 2,000 state, local and national associations draw funds.

Memorial to Dr. Trudeau

The Trudeau medal is to be awarded at the general opening meeting May 31 to an unannounced person selected for outstanding work in the anti-tuberculosis campaign. The medal was named in honor of Dr. Edward Livingston Trudeau, founder of the first tuberculosis sanatorium in the United States.

The roster of officers of the National Tuberculosis Association includes President Roosevelt as honorary vice president. The association president is Dr. Esmond R. Long of Philadelphia. Other officers are Dr. Jabez H. Sweeney, Chicago, vice president, Elliott, Toronto, and Dr. Henry C. and Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, Philadelphia, secretary.

Dr. Munford Smith, Los Angeles, is president of the American Sanatorium Association and A. W. Jones, St. Louis, is president of the National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries.

'Asleep on the Job' With Approval

Many workers of the Republic Steel Corp. in Chicago stayed on the job despite nearly 100,000 striking workers who tied up the plants of three major independent companies in five states. This picture shows a group of workers sleeping in the plant. Those staying at work also had meals delivered while the fires of other plants were banked and tall stacks stood smokeless.

TWO AMERICANS AT OXFORD WIN HERO CITATIONS

OXFORD, Eng. (UP)—Two American undergraduates in Oxford University were commended at a coroner's inquest here for their bravery in rescuing one fellow student from drowning and attempting to save another.

The Americans, Harvey Picker, New Rochelle, N. Y., and Kemper Campbell, Victorville, Cal., were punting on the River Ederwall when they heard cries for help from a distance of 200 yards down-stream. Grounding their boat, they ran to the scene of the accident where Picker immediately dived in and rescued one of the canoeists, Gwydal Evans, who was thrown into the water when their canoe capsized. The body was recovered 20 minutes later.

Picker was graduated from Colgate University in 1936 while Campbell came from the city high school of Victorville. They are both in St. John's college, Oxford.

SOCIETY IN FINAL MEET

WINTERSBURG, June 3.—The final meeting of the Wintersburg Ladies Aid society before the opening of the new year, was held yesterday at the Methodist church social hall, and women of the community were invited to join in the sewing of garments which are designed for charitable purposes.

The meeting opened at 10 o'clock and at noon at covered luncheon was served. Mrs. Allen Young, president of the Aid was in charge.

SOUTH ASSAILS PRO-NORTHERN FREIGHT RATES

ATLANTA, Ga.—(UP)—Governors of eight southeastern states united in a fight to end "inequalities in freight rates that give unfair advantage to eastern industrial centers over their southern competitors."

The governors raising a $100,000 war chest for the struggle, pointed out that "discriminatory" freight rates permit eastern shippers to undersell southern manufacturers and have long hampered development of southern industry.

Gov. Bibb Graves of Alabama, said he planned to ask the assistance of southern railroads in the fight "because lower interterritorial rates will mean increased business to the roads."

"If we can beat these barriers down you will see millions of dollars worth of southern products going into the areas north of the Ohio river and west of the Mississippi," he said.

As an example of "discrimination," it was pointed out that it costs $1.03 to ship 100 pounds of granite from Elberta, Ga., to Chicago, while it costs only 82 cents to ship the same amount from Barre, Vt., a distance of 130 miles more.

Cotton Goods Cited

Another instance was cited in the 99 cent rate on cotton goods from Macon, Ga., to Toledo, O., while the rates from Fall River, Mass., to Toledo is 91 cents for almost the same mileage.

The cost of shipping overalls and shirts from Atlanta, to Elgin, Ill., is $1.86 per hundredweight, it was pointed out, while shippers in Allentown, Pa., pay $1.48 for the same haul.

Gov. Gordon Browning of Tennessee said the discriminatory freight rates were caused by the "intense organization of eastern manufacturers to eliminate competition."

"A hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission will be the first toward reduction of the unfair rates," he said. "The industrial trend is southward and elimination of discriminatory rates will speed development in the south."

Four-Point Program Formed
Governors of Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee, Louisiana, Florida,

North Carolina and Alabama, banded together to pursue "the most determined battle for a tariff parity ever launched in behalf of this section, decided upon a four-point line of battle in a conference in Atlanta:

"1—Pursue the present campaign for a lowering of class freight rates, an investigation of which already has been ordered by the I.C.C.

"2—Demand postponement of the effective date (June 8) of a 15 per cent increase in interterritorial rates on processed cotton goods, which textile leaders say will severely cripple industry in the south.

"3—Ask for a general lowering of commodity rates on leading products of this section.

"4—Request state interterritorial rates on all shipments as low as those in effect in the northern and western territories. At present there is a 27 per cent higher differential on shipments from the south."

Louis Napoleon, His Crown Gained, Jilted Pert Bar-Maid Who Was Lover In Exile

None But Elisabeth Howard Took His Throne Aspirations Seriously

Editor's Note: A romance that began, rather than ended, in exile is that of Louis Napoleon and the river-front London barmaid who, almost alone, had faith in his political destiny. Their story is told below in the fourth of six articles about "Lovers in Exile."

By MORRIS GILBERT
(NEA Service Staff Writer)

The young nephew of the great Napoleon was in exile. He considered himself the pretender to his uncle's imperial throne. Twice he had attempted a coup d'etat against the established government of France. Each attempt had ended in ludicrous failure.

Established in London, in 1846, Louis Napoleon was rather a comic figure. He was always that, in fact, even in the days of his glittering triumph later. Nothing he accomplished ever succeeded in destroying the faint, malodorous taint of the phoney. Perhaps it was an account of his legs, which were much too short. Atop a horse, Louis Napoleon made a distinguished appearance. Afoot, he was ridiculous. Or maybe it was an account of his face, a masterpiece in dead-pan-ery.

Try as he might, he could not convince Londoners in general that he was going to be emperor of France some day. He got little support for his idea that his third attempt would succeed, except from one person.

ONE-TIME BARMAID
GAMBLER ON HIS SUCCESS
The one person who believed in him was an ex-barmaid from

A comic figure except when he was on a horse, Louis Napoleon (right) reversed the usual procedure of kings—it was in exile that he found love, in the person of buxom, flirtatious Elisabeth Howard (left), and used her wealth as stepping stones to the French throne.

The last hopes of Elisabeth Howard, barmaid who aspired to be queen, that Napoleon III would make her his bride, went glimmering when the great Bonaparte's nephew married another commoner, Eugenie de Montijo, in the imperial ceremony (sketched above) in Notre Dame cathedral.

Lambeth, the daughter of a Thames boatman. Her name was Elisabeth Herriott, though by the time Louis Napoleon met her she had renounced the Lambeth "pup" for more luxurious surroundings and associates, and had changed her name to the more aristocratic Elisabeth Howard.

This dockside beauty was to take her place in history. She was to stake Louis Napoleon on an imperial crown. She had a chance—not a great one, to be sure, although she thought so—of being empress. She did become Countess de Beauregard, chateaine of a fine estate, and rich. Her $100,000 invested in Louis Napoleon had been highly profitable.

Elisabeth Howard began life with certain natural endowments. She was radiantly handsome of face, with a splendid physique and figure. Described as taller than average, her beauty was classic, and she had a complexion "which defied the ravages of time and dissipation."

WIT MADE UP FOR LACK OF EDUCATION

Able to read and write "only with difficulty," she made up for the lack of these artificial talents by a quick cockney wit, excellent humor, and the "readiness to enter into a flirtation" which made her, in Lambeth, quite a unique personality. She was "just the type to attract customers," Charles Kingston relates, but pretty soon it became obvious that she was too good for a "pub."

Fitzroy's prophecy came true. By the time he was exposed as a cheat, Elisabeth had made the acquaintance of all the young bloods in the metropolis, had won the title of "Queen of London," become the pre-eminent light lady of the town. A major in Her Majesty's Life Guards established her in a dwelling in Oxford Street so lavishly furnished that he almost went broke. Well established, Elisabeth quarreled with him. A mere major, without a great fortune, was not her destined mate.

Several stories exist of the meeting of Elisabeth and the fledgling and slightly mortified eagle, Captain the Hon. D. Fitzroy, British journalist, relates how a friend of his, one night in Drury Lane, advised her to take the prince instead of some English peer for whom she had been angling. Another account states that Count d'Orsay, compatriot of Louis Napoleon and the "most accomplished dandy of his time," introduced them.

By that time Elisabeth was fairly rich. Three English nobles had made her presents of approximately $150,000. But there was a streak of romance in her. She could be generous as well as shrewd. And when generosity and romance were coupled with the possibility of a fabulous return, she persuaded herself to take the plunge.

NAME OF NAPOLEON PROVED MAGIC
Louis Napoleon had another passion, apart from his ambition to be emperor of France. The list of his conquests reads like the "Bottin Mondain." He was a gusty lover. His moods were sudden and violent. While still an exile in London, he won the hearts of several beautiful and titled English ladies, but it was to Elisabeth, finally, that he devoted most of his attention. To her, he could tell his hopes, his plans, with some expectation of belief.

Events developed suddenly in France. The revolt of 1848 drove Louis Philippe from the throne. A republic with "universal suffrage" returned, and the campaign to bring Louis Napoleon to power commenced. His name was enough. The pretender was elected deputy from several departments of France at once. The exile could return.

He did. Equipped with Elisabeth's money for bribes and his own expenses, he set up his campaign in Paris. Within a year, he was president of France. The name of the great Napoleon had "put him over."

Elisabeth lived first at the Hotel Meurice. Her apartments there became headquarters for the group which was planning a "putsch" to make Louis Napoleon emperor. Later, she moved to a house in the rue du Cirque, just around the corner from the Elysee Palace. This was after Louis Napoleon was president. Late most every afternoon, passers-by could perceive him leave the garden gate of the presidential palace in the Avenue Gabriel, and saunter around to Miss Howard's.

A year later, Louis Napoleon was Emperor Napoleon III. His destiny was fulfilled, thanks to the help of a Thames-side barmaid.

REIMBURSED HER GENEROUSLY FOR BACKING

It seemed to Elisabeth Howard that all was well. Once installed as president, Napoleon began paying back his debts to her with interest. As emperor, he was even more lavish. A million francs in money in a single month—approximately $40,000—wiped out a big slice of the principal. Almost another million in jewelry helped. The Beauregard estate which he bought her when he made her a countess cost two million francs, $80,000.

The emperor was devoted and—moderately—faithful. Elisabeth, knowing him so well, could hardly expect more. She was at the peak of her success. The notion began to dawn that, perhaps, something even more spectacular, more magnificent than hitherto imaginable, might be written in her destiny. But she was wrong.

Presently, she began to hear that Napoleon, for dynastic reasons, was contemplating a royal marriage. To wed some European princess would go far to cement his throne.

Putting aside the notion of being empress herself, Elisabeth became fairly philosophical about a royal marriage. Such a match would surely not be a love match. After a little while, Louis Napoleon would come back to her. With some complacency, she watched events. She would still, she felt assured, be mistress en titre.

But European princesses—and their parents—were cold. Not one would venture to gamble on this upstart ruler. Suspect, shaky, he offered no security. There was no belief the new regime would last. It would probably topple, Europe thought, even more quickly than the First Empire had done.

Irritated, piqued, Napoleon gave up the quest. And at that moment a vastly shrewder blow fell upon the beautiful Miss Howard; for Napoleon III fell in love—and with a commoner!

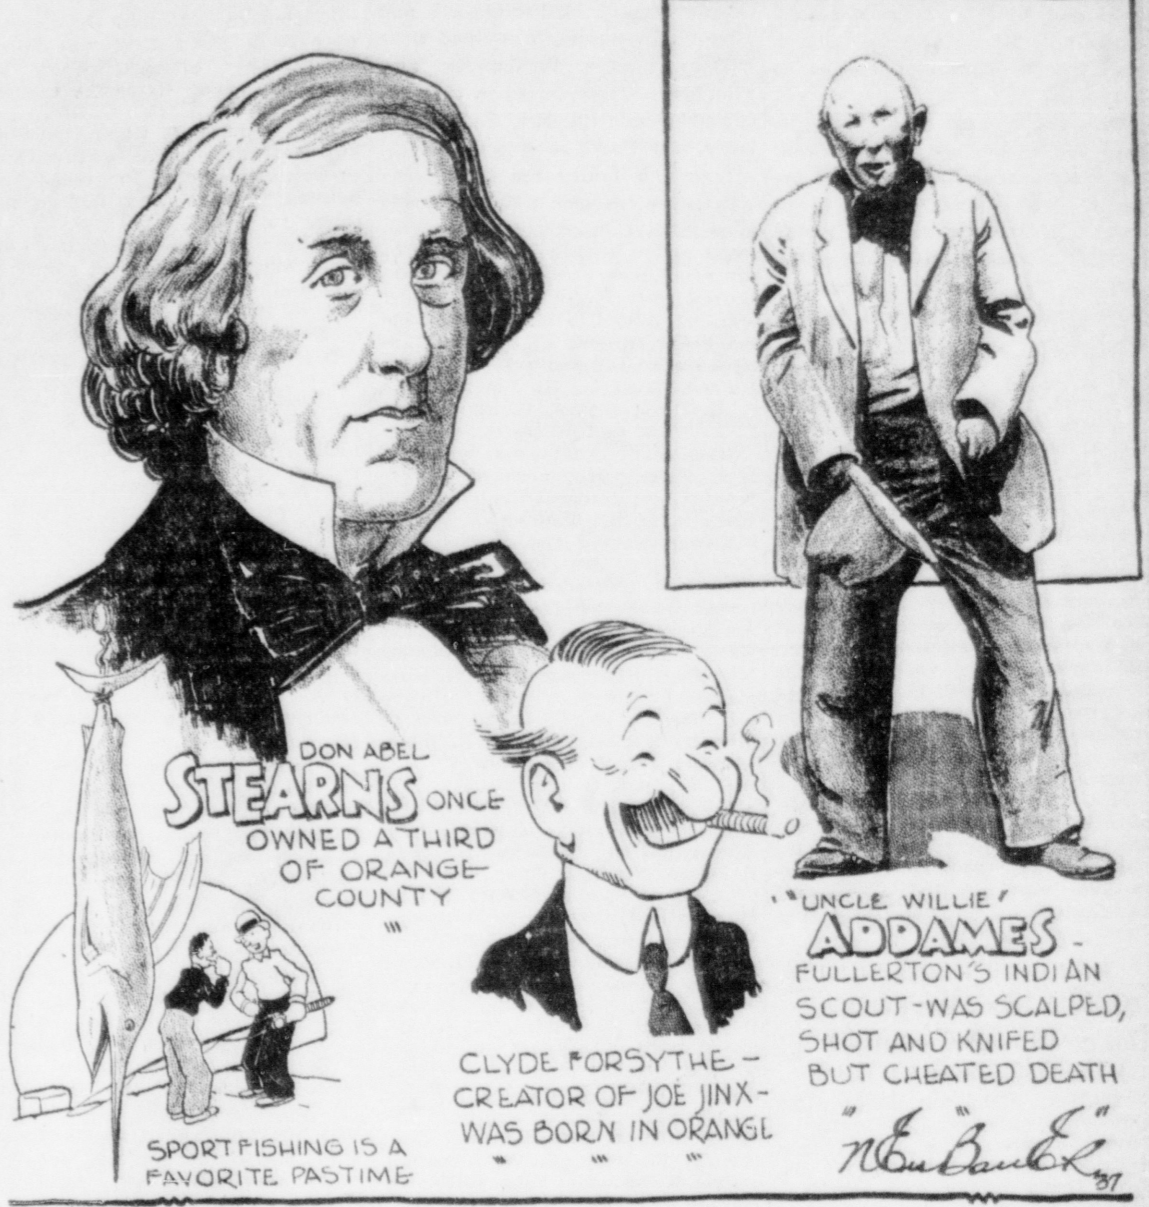

A royal marriage she could have accepted. But, if Napoleon were going to marry somebody like Mademoiselle de Montijo, that was too much! But it happened—with a great assembly of prelates and nobles in Notre Dame (not so great, by the way, as the emperor would have wished, since the old French aristocracy still scorned him as an upstart commoner).

Explanatory Notes

DON ABEL STEARNS
Abel Stearns, a native of Salem, Mass., went to Mexico in 1826 and immediately took up citizenship in that country. Three years later, as a man of 30, he started to acquire vast land holdings in California.

The Yankee Don built a warehouse and sent gold out of the state. About $50,000 of this was placed mined at San Francisco.

Stearns was a powerful political figure in the state during both the Mexican and American administration and held many high offices during both. He was alcalde, perfect, supervisor, councilman, justice of peace and assemblyman.

Rich as he was, the great drought of 1863-64 nearly whipped him and he even lost his beautiful Alamitos rancho where he built a palatial home in the depression that followed. He died in 1871.

UNCLE WILLIE ADDAMES
Uncle Willie Addames celebrated his 100th birthday April 25. After going through a hectic life of adventure, which saw him on the American frontier.

Uncle Willie saw action as a sailor before the mast, coming around The Horn on a windjammer during the gold rush days. He still carries lead from a Union soldier's gun, and has the scars of an Indian brave's knife.

But he lived to tell about it on his 100th birthday!

Fate always saved him! The Indian who almost lifted his scalp he killed with the last bullet in his revolver.

He was with the scouting force that came to Custer's rescue only too late.

"I never give up," is the little man's secret of life. He fights to the bitter end and never will be licked.

Mock Wedding Comes as Feature of Party Honoring Bride-elect

Kitchen-ware for her new home soon to be established was presented Wednesday night to Miss Evelyn Coffman, fiancée of William Graupensperger, at a shower given by Miss Nan Sutherland and Miss Evelyn June Hammett in the latter's home in Tustin. Miss Coffman and Mr. Graupensperger plan to be married June 27.

A mock wedding was the feature of the evening, with Miss Ernestine Erwin playing the part of the bride. Mildred Cowan was the bridegroom, and Mrs. Everett Cornwell took the part of the preacher. Mrs. Neil Adams was awarded first prize for writing a poem, "A Wish for the Bride," with Miss Ernestine Erwin receiving consolation award. Gifts were presented to the honoree in advance of the refreshment interval.

Jello dessert, cake and coffee were served at a large table with a centerpiece of a bridal figure made of kitchen articles, which proved to be the two hostesses' gift for the honoree. Placecards carrying out a bridal motif, and cellophane bags of rice tied with white tulle ribbons were at each place. Flowers in bridal white were used in the dining room, while other rooms were decked with bright-hued blossoms.

Present with the two hostesses and the honoree, were Misses Lillian Graupensperger, Ethel Duckett, Audrey Summers, Ernestine Erwin, Mildred Cowan, Virginia Golden, Mrs. Neil Adams and Mrs. Everett Cornwell.

Auxiliary Members Give Program

Jack Fisher Auxiliary D. A. V. presented a program on Americanism for students of Delhi school recently at a general assembly in the school, with Mrs. Leo Payne, Americanization chairman of the auxiliary, presiding over the event.

Auxiliary members presented each fifth and sixth grade student with a small American flag, and provided two American flags for each school room.

The Mixing Bowl

By ANN MEREDITH

Bread omelette is a lot better than it sounds, and what a life-saver it is for the days when your food budget will not stretch to cover roast, chops or steak! Two cups of cold roast, finely chopped with plenty of parsley seasonings, will make an omelette sufficient to serve five. Cold salmon or any cooked fish will do the same thing, and for a luscious CHICKEN omelette, one of those small jars of canned chicken will do the trick.

Line a buttered baking dish (shallow) with seasoned chopped meat or fish. Soak 2 1/2 cups boiling milk, add 2 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper to taste, pour the hot bread and milk mixture into a well beaten egg, pour immediately over the meat and bake 25 minutes in a medium hot oven, watching heat to see that the eggs do not curdle and spoil the dish.

With this omelette you might serve green peas, buttered, new potatoes in butter and parsley, or creamed if the omelette seems too dry. Serve radishes and onions in place of salad, hot French bread with garlic butter, and strawberry shortcake for dessert.

Overweight adds years to your age and shortens your life span. Don't carry a load of fat when you can get rid of it so easily and safely with our Safe and Sane reducing diet. Why not write for your copy today? (Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope).

Wallis' Wedding Costume

The wedding ensemble which Mrs. Wallis Warfield wore when she stood in the library of the Chateau de Candé June 3 and became the bride and duchess of the Duke of Windsor is sketched here. Designed by Mainbocher, the ensemble is of heavy silk crepe in the new "Wallis blue." The long afternoon dress with slim skirt, bias-cut bodice and heart-shaped neckline, is worn with a matching jacket, graceful of line and also cut on the bias. The dress sleeves are long and tight, while those of the jacket are seven-eighth length and flare at the wrist. The jacket has a high, rounded throat line and a plastron of vertical shirring, stopping just above the waistline yoke, which is snugly fitted and finished with encrustations.

Salt and pepper
Minced parsley
1-2 cup hot melted butter

Tie the piece of fish in cheese cloth and boil in salted water until tender (about 30 minutes). Drain, remove skin and bones and arrange in center of hot platter. Sprinkle liberally with minced parsley and pour the hot butter over fish. While the fish is cooking take cold mashed potatoes, mould into balls, arrange on a buttered baking dish, then carefully (using a spoon) scoop out a hole in each potato ball. Put a bit of butter in each hole and bake to a pale brown in a hot oven. Carefully transfer to the fish platter and fill each potato cup with freshly cooked hot peas.

The other vegetable might be diced canned beets in a sweet-sour sauce, commonly known as Harvard beets.

VISITORS FROM NORTH

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd L. Stevens and daughter, Betty Joanne, have returned to their home in Bakersfield after a several days' visit with Mrs. Stevens' mother and sister, Mrs. Ethel Brownlow and Miss Opal Brownlow, 1309 Maple street. Mrs. Brownlow and Miss Brownlow had planned a surprise dinner party at a Los Angeles cafe. Decorated anniversary confection was served as a feature of the last course. Special music was dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Stevens.

SEAL PITCHERS FALTER: SOLONS BARK AT HEELS

(By United Press)

Sacramento was within one game of first place in the Pacific Coast league today as the Solons from the state capital demonstrated for the second time their superiority over the pace-setting San Francisco Seals.

Sacramento, the only team to take a series from the San Francisco club this season, had a 2-1 edge in the current series and good prospects of not only repeating their feat but of capturing first place as a result.

Catching the O'Doul team at a time when its pitching staff was crippled, the Solons walloped the enemy in the opening game of the series, bowled to Gene Lillard in the second, and hammered the Seals' No. 2 pitcher, Ed Stutz, unmercifully for a 12-3 win last night.

The tipoff on the condition of the Seal staff came when Manager O'Doul left Stutz in for the entire game, although Sacramento smashed him for 19 hits and scored 9 runs in the last three innings.

O'Doul had no one else ready to go. Flowers, Shores and Daglia are ailing, Ballou and Sheehan aren't "right," and Cole was due to pitch tonight, while Sam Gibson worked Tuesday.

Most attention in the league was centered on this series between the two teams battling for top honors.

In other series Oakland continued its march through Los Angeles last night with a 7-5 win over their third straight win over the Angels. Strengthened all around the Oaks sent a new pitcher, Al Piechota, to the mound and he came through with his second win in a week. Don Hurst's homer in the Los Angeles seventh, when four runs crossed, was the only damaging blow against him.

Seattle took the Missions, 7-3, in a poorly played game in which there were eight errors, five by the winners.

Paul Gregory, despite this ragged support, kept the Seals under control after his mates gave him five runs in the fifth.

Portland beat San Diego, 6-2, with Ad Liska, most dependable of Beaver hurlers, turning in a six-inning performance. Craghead and Hebert worked for the third place club, yielding 12 hits between them.

NEW YORK, June 4.—(UP)—There was great excitement along the street today when police surrounded a man who was a "dead singer" for Robert Irwin, 29-year-old sculptor wanted for the triple murder of Veronica Gedeon, artist's model, her mother and a boarder in the Gedeon apartment.

Detectives called their superiors, and reported that "it looks like we got Irwin." Newspapersmen and photographers descended upon the station in great numbers.

For almost an hour the questioning continued. Suddenly the "suspect" lifted his right leg, pulled his trousers leg up to his knee and asked: "Did Irwin have a wooden leg?" The "suspect" was released.

REPORTS THEFT OF CHICKENS, SHEETS

"Chickens, cleaned and dressed," might easily become the slogan of an unapprehended thief. According to Lawrence Baker, Anaheim, someone entered his ranch last night and made off with nine hens, one rooster, two bed sheets and a shower curtain, he reported in a call to sheriff's office.

According to Deputy Sheriff Harvey Gulick and Steve Duhart, who investigated the call, the thief entered a grove on the ranch from Crescent avenue and loaded the loot into a car on Gilbert street.

ARRESTED ON WARRANT

Deputy Sheriff Bob Steinberger and Fred Humiston arrested Alfredo Virmontez, 25 of Costa Mesa, last evening, on a bench warrant signed by Superior Judge James L. Allen, and charging Virmontez with violation of probation.

BROUGHT TO JAIL HERE

Arrested by immigration officers at San Pedro, Pedro Ramirez, 29, of the Palos Verdes ranch, Redondo Beach, was brought to Orange county jail yesterday by Deputy Sheriff G. F. McKelvey and James Musick to face a felony charge of assault with deadly weapon.

COMMITTEE CALLS 2 FORD EMPLOYEES

DETROIT, June 4.—(UP)—Robert Ehrlich, an investigator for the senate civil liberties committee, today served two Ford employees, Wilfred Comment and Oscar Jones, with subpoenas to appear before the committee in Washington, July 1.

The subpoenas were signed by Sen. Robert M. LaFollette Jr., Prog. Wis., chairman of the committee. Ehrlich said additional subpoenas would be served on others who participated in a near-riot at the Ford Motor company plant a week ago. He declined to reveal their names.

This disclosure followed closely the action of Harry Bennett, chief of the Ford service department, who telephoned the county prosecutor's office, informing officials he would appear before a one-man grand jury for questioning Monday.

TORNADO STRIKES CITY SECOND TIME

McCAMEY, Tex., June 4.—(UP)—A tornado that doubled back and struck a second time, wrecked 150 homes in this oil field hamlet last night, causing damage estimated at $100,000. Three persons were injured.

The tornado struck first at dusk, approaching from the northwest. Wind gusts ripped sheet iron roofs from oil shacks, tore away part of the postoffice roof and splintered pillars in front of the Baptist church. Streets were flooded.

From four to five inches of rain fell. Then the storm struck in full force again at 10 p. m. Roofs were blown from the two hotels and many oil derricks toppled.

NAME ATTACKER OF MOVIE EXTRA

HOLLYWOOD, June 4.—(UP)—District Attorney Buron Fitts today disclosed he had been given the name of a film salesman who supposedly attacked Patricia Douglas, film extra, at a stag party held in conjunction with a major studio's sales convention.

The district attorney, who took personal charge of the investigation into charges filed by the pretty 20-year-old extra, issued a statement today which said:

"The story told by her was that she became very ill and had left the banquet table going out to an automobile where, in the darkness, she was attacked by an unknown man. She stated at that time she could not identify the party who was supposed to have attacked her."

"Likewise, she stated that she intended, through her attorney, to file a $100,000 lawsuit against him. This office will continue its investigation."

A story that the party was "one of the wildest ever staged" was denied today by Wallace Beery, film star, who was a guest at the affair. Beery said it was "very orderly as far as I could see."

FLEET SAILS FOR SAN PEDRO HARBOR

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—(UP)—Forty thousand officers and sailors of the United States fleet sailed from San Francisco harbor today for San Pedro after participating in the Golden Gate bridge fiesta.

Forty battleships, aircraft tenders, cruisers and destroyers were in the fleet that sailed under command of Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn aboard the flagship Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania proceeded to Puget Sound.

The situation was cleared last night when one of two labor organizations at the Ford plant withdrew its petition for an election under the Wagner act to determine whether the U. A. W. A. should be permitted to bargain for the workers.

Clarence Bullwinkle, plant manager, said he was conferring today with Pat Smith, Ford personnel representative from Detroit, and the announcement of policy would be made after their meeting.

Frank Slaby, U. A. W. A. leader, told a mass meeting of workers last night that the rival Machinists' union had withdrawn from the dispute.

NEW MEXICO CITY FACES MARTIAL LAW

CARLSBAD, N. M., June 4.—(UP)—Carlsbad was preparing today for a possible declaration of martial law and evacuation of all residents should the swift flood waters of the Pecos river tear out McMillan dam, 18 miles north of here.

Crews of C.C.C. and W.P.A. enrollees labored in relays reinforcing the dam with sandbags.

L. E. Foster, reclamation superintendent, warned that Carlsbad would be under six feet of water if the dam breaks. However, no danger was expected for 48 hours and it was estimated that the water, if released, would require five hours to reach the city.

Mayor John Sears appointed emergency committees to supervise policing, transportation, food and sanitation should evacuation become necessary. Present plans are to evacuate the populace to the heights south of Carlsbad.

FIND NEW CLUES IN PLANE SEARCH

ALPINE, Utah, June 4.—(UP)—Encouraged by new clues, letters from the mail cargo and spotches of oil on the ground, searchers poked into snowdrifts in a canyon off Chipman's peak today, expecting momentarily to find the wreckage of the long lost Western seven persons aboard when it vanished.

The plane has been missing since December 15, 1936. The search was centered in this desolate mountain country a week ago when natives found two unopened letters that were identified as part of the mail cargo aboard the plane. Yesterday two more letters were found, and another pool of oil below a rock ledge. Obviously the oil had been spilled from a plane.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
PATRICIA WARREN, heroine, secretary to Don Monteray, actor-playwright.
TRISSY WARREN, Pats' cousin and roommate in New York.
DON MONTERAY, Patricia's actor-employer.
ROSAMOND AKERS, Patricia's rival.

CHAPTER IX

PATS and Don drove out the Boston Post road in the late afternoon sunshine. She kept telling herself, "I'm sitting beside my husband and he loves me," but the words failed to click in her be-dumbed brain. She and Don were lovers; nothing counted against that. They loved and the world was lost in unthinking rapture.

"You look so sweet," he said huskily. "I think of you every minute of the day and you fill my dreams at night, but when I see you I realize all over again how lovely you are."

"Don—" The name slipped out and his hand covered hers for a moment. "You can't mean that. Why—I might be anybody."

"You are my whole life now. It doesn't matter who you used to be. You see," he went on gently, "I have never been in love before and I'm taking it rather hard."

"It can't be love."
"It is love and I'm this much in earnest. Tomorrow I shall tell Patricia, and very soon, in a few days, I think, I shall be free again."

THEY had tea before a blazing fire in a small white cottage. Sitting side by side on an old Duncan Fife sofa they drank tea from exquisite Spode cups. A withered, soft-spoken gentlewoman served them. Twilight fell and still they lingered, caught in the mystery and magic of newly awakened love. Alone in the charming room, Don took Pats in his arms.

"Darling," he breathed, "I love you." And blindly she raised her lips, fiercely she clung to him while the crimson world rocked and spun.

"I've kissed so many women," he said, half laughing, his hand lean cheek pressed close to hers. "And I've really never kissed anyone before."

"Dearest," Pats whispered. Later, driving slowly homeward, Don said, "I promised not to ask questions, but—won't you tell me, sweetheart?"

Pats nodded dreamily. "With my life. Tomorrow—at the Coronet." Vaguely she wanted time in which to choose the words of her confession. Suppose his love turned to mere regard for his wife, Patricia, when he learned that he had been the victim of a bold feminine trick.

After breakfast the next morning Don broached the subject of their marriage contract. He told Pats that he loved someone very dearly, that she was in trouble and that he must be free to protect her with his name. Pats calmly accepted the announcement, acknowledged his sincere thanks for her many kindnesses and the convenient marriage of Don Monteray and his unattractive secretary was, within a few hours, to be ended.

PATS took a walk in the park to think things over. She walked slowly, trying to outline the story she must tell Don. As proof of her astounding news she would produce the wig and glasses. Step by step she rehearsed her lines. All the time a little dread tugged in the back of her mind. Could she convince Don of her love? And might not his love turn to weary indifference with the realization that he had been duped? In a state of conflicting emotions she went back to the hotel. In the lobby, the manager asked if he might see her privately for a few moments.

His grievance was Rosie. He apologized explained that her account was getting out of hand. He had spoken to her repeatedly and she had definitely given him the impression that she was Mr. Monteray's guest. Quite obviously the manager believed that Rosie had been "putting something over" on Don Monteray's wife, also that he felt certain of getting the bill paid by appealing to Mrs. Monteray. Naturally she would allow no breath to scandal to touch her famous husband.

Pats explained that Mr. Monteray was in no way responsible for Miss Akers, but signified her willingness to settle the account providing Rosie spent not another night in the hotel. The manager agreed and Pats opened her check book. The amount was rather staggering but she wrote the check. To be rid of Rosie was cheap at any price.

At 3:30 Pats, leaving the hotel, was a witness to Rosie's eviction. Her bags were carried out and arranged neatly on the sidewalk and Rosie, scarlet-cheeked and raging, flounced out after them. Pats was near enough to touch her, but Rosie showed not the slightest sign of recognition. No one could have possibly associated the slimy elegant Pats with the dowdy Mrs. Monteray. But a hard-eyed man, lounging near the entrance, became suddenly active. As Pats stepped into a cab he signaled another, gave a curt order to the driver, and leaned forward, his eyes never losing sight of the taxi in which Pats rode. When she alighted on Fifth avenue he was close behind.

He stood near her in a flower shop and looked with apparent indifference into her gaping purse while the attendant pinned an orchid on the soft fur at Pats' throat. What he saw in the purse was a brown wig and tinted spectacles. A satisfied gleam lighted his cold, observant eyes. These items were to be the convincing proof for Don.

Pats walked along the avenue. It was when she had almost reached the Coronet that she suddenly realized she was being followed. Unconsciously she had been aware of the shadow in the flower shop, had several times caught the same reflection in the shop windows. She hastened her steps. Soon she would be safe with Don. It was alarming, even in broad daylight, to be followed this way. About to enter the tea garden the shadow slid between her and the door.

"Just a minute," he said, courteously enough.

THE man was short and stout, his clothes were sadly in need of pressing. His hat was pulled well over his eyes. He stopped Pats with a hand on her arm.

"If you're smart you won't raise any fuss," he said in a low voice. "How dare you speak to me?" She was angry and at the same time desperately frightened. Her eyes searched the street for Don's car. At a signal from the cold-eyed man a taxi drew up to the curb.

He motioned in the direction of the cab. "Step right in," he advised. "You and I have a little business to transact." As Pats struggled to break away he opened his coat and her startled eyes fell on a badge, obviously the insignia of the law.

"You are making a dreadful mistake," she said furiously.

"We'll let the district attorney decide about that. If I'm making a mistake you have nothing to fear." With a firm hand he propelled her into the cab. Pats leaned to the window, frantic eyes on the disappearing tea garden.

"What is the meaning of this outrage?" she demanded. Quite suddenly she knew. This detective believed her to be the blond diamond thief. For a fleeting instant she thought it funny, then terror swept over her.

FIFTY TO RIDE MOUNTAIN TRAIL

BANFF, Alberta (UP) — Mouna Assiniboine, long known as the Matterhorn of the Canadian Rockies, will be the objective of the annual five-day ride from Banff starting July 30 and ending Aug. 3. The trip, arranged by the band of outdoor enthusiasts known as the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, will be headed by their new president, R. H. Palenske, of Chicago.

Riding trail by day and sleeping under canvas at night, the group will spend two nights in the camp at the base of the 12,000-foot mountain, with plenty of extra time for fishing in nearby Marvel Lake or for hiking.

This cavalcade will set out along Brewster Creek for Brewster

Camp, where the first night will be spent, and then continues to Mt. Assiniboine, remaining there the next two nights. The fourth day's trek is through the Simpson Range and over the 7,000-foot Simpson Pass to Sunshine Camp.

On the following morning the group follows Healy Creek into the Borgeau Range for the annual Pow-Wow before reentering Banff. The party will consist of 50 riders, plus a crew of guides, cooks, horse-wranglers and a pack train of 50 horses to carry camping gear and supplies.

The Trail Riders' membership of more than 1,200 is scattered on all the five continents, and includes representatives of the arts, professional and business worlds. Ramsay MacDonald and the ex-King and Queen of Siam are active members.

Long known as the Matterhorn of the Canadian Rockies, Mt. Assiniboine (11,870 ft.) probably was seen in 1841 by the early explorer Sir George Simpson, and later named for the tribe of Assiniboine or Stoney Indians who inhabit the region. The mountain's first accredited visitor was R. L. Barrett, who reached it in 1893 under the guidance of the late Tom Wilson of Banff. The first to climb this peak was Sir James Opatram, who in 1901 stood on its summit, looked down its sheer wall to the shining glacier 8,000 feet below and counted a dozen lakes in the ranges that stretched before him. A dozen years ago the peak was scaled by Harry Pollard, Canadian photographer and charter member of the Trail Riders. Its most recent conquest was made in 1931 by young Miss Georgia Engelhardt of New York, also a member of the Trail Riders and member of the American Alpine Club.

Farmers Told Chemurgy Aid Isn't Cure-All

ROCHESTER, Minn. — (UP) — Fear that agriculturists may become too optimistic about development of new commercial uses for farm products was expressed by P. W. Peck, director of agricultural extension and vice-director of agricultural research of the University of Minnesota farm.

There is danger that possibilities in the field of farm chemurgy may be overdone, Peck said. He explained that chemistry at work with farm products has attracted a great deal of attention among industrialists, chemists and farm leaders, but that farmers may rush into production of commodities intended for commercial use but for which no adequate market has been developed. Industry may not be able to pay high enough prices to justify production of such products by farmers, Peck said.

He warned farmers to consider whether new industrial products may not actually compete on the market with other established products of the farm. Food and fiber products now being most prominently considered for industrial utilization were cited as examples.

GARDEN AND HOME

BEAUTY SPOTS IN ORANGE COUNTY

One of the beauty spots of Orange county is the garden at the home of James Tuffree in Placentia. Below is a picture of the beautiful fence which encloses the garden. Branches of decorative trees hang gracefully over the top of the wall. Large openings in the fence make it possible for passers-by to see the garden within. One of the attractive features of the garden is the old water wheel which is shown in the lower photograph. Mrs. Tuffree is shown leaning on the wall that supports the wheel.

Orange County Gardening

By Mrs. H. Cardoza Sloan, Corona Del Mar

Being sound advice and interesting comment on what to plant and how to care for Orange county gardens.

Floral Bells

After a hard day's labor in the garden, I was walking home in the twilight. The afterglow had faded and only faint bands of pale color showed in the cloudy western sky. Against the soft light the cypress trees along the roadside stood out in points of deep shadowy green. The rather boisterous breeze of the daytime had died away, the air was quiet and still. From all around rose the rhythmic night song of the crickets, and now and then the sleepy twitter of birds. Drifting in from the harbor entrance came the clear, measured ringing of the bell buoy.

And in my heart the bells of memory began to ring. The bell buoy at Nobles Light, down on old Cape Cod, and I riding in a "buggy" on summer afternoons, the salt air warmed with the scent of sweet fern; the Beacon bell in Yarmouth Harbor, and hurrying to get dressed before the boat docked, and through the open porthole the clear Northern light of early summer morning on the green fields and little low houses, and cows by the old stone walls; church bells ringing in that same Nova Scotia town and old, old hymns on the chimneys; church bells at home, the rainbow blued light through the rose window slanting down on the quiet congregation, and my fingers waiting over the organ keys so that the ocean tone might pick up the last vibration of the bell. Bells—bells—bells—"foxgloves, in whose drooping bells the bee makes her sweet music." And then I fell to thinking of the bell flowers, of which I am particularly fond.

Digitalis

The foxglove, first of all, and how I love that plant. Against fence or hedge, in sun, or even better in partial shade, how stately it rises with its tall spikes of bloom, how beautiful its bells, how delicate their colors, how altogether lovely this dear old favorite. It comes readily and quickly from seed—it often self-seeds in literal thousands, it grows rapidly and makes sturdy little plants. When set in the garden it is strong and healthy and handsome, summer and winter, an ornament to the garden border if it never had a bloom.

There are other varieties, but the Giant Shirley, produced in the garden of an English clergyman, is the finest. It grows from 5 to 7 feet tall, with 4-foot spikes of bloom, pure white to dark rose, handsomely spotted and blotched.

Campanulas

Then, of course, there are the campanulas, whose very name means "little bell." The most familiar form of these is C. medium, the Canterbury bell, and every garden lover knows how charming they are. There are single bells, and double. One year mine were triple, three sets of petals. And I got three crops of blossoms, too, by dint of careful snipping of faded blooms every day, and a task it was. Like the foxgloves, the Canterbury bells make handsome plants aside from their flowers.

There is now an annual form of the Canterbury bell, blooming in about six months from seed, growing some two feet tall and producing six to eight spikes of bloom. Very satisfactory, and pleasant not to have to wait until the second year for the plants to flower.

Another favorite is Campanula persicifolia, the "Peach Bells," very hardy, two to three feet high, an old species with violet blue flowers, single, or with double flowers in blue or white.

Most striking of all is C. pyramidalis, the "Chimney Bellflower." This grows four to five feet tall, sometimes taller, with immense spikes of blue, salver-shaped flowers. One of these plants is a magnificent sight, well worth trying to grow even if you only produce one perfect plant.

Not all the campanulas are tall or medium. Many varieties grow around a foot high, many only a few inches, other tall. Of the low growing varieties perhaps one most useful is Campanula, the "Carpathian harebell." This is a delectable little plant, very free flowering, blooming a long season—June to November—has a clear blue bell flower, and is fine for the rock garden or as an edging. It comes readily from seed, but all the Campanulas have very fine seed, which should be sown in a seed pan, sifted leafmold soil, glass on top, water from the bottom, and all that fuss. But it's worth it, and most of the seeds germinate quickly.

Rotundifolia

The Rotundifolia is the "Blue Bell of Scotland," the true harebell. This grows taller than the Carpathian, about a foot high, has a clear blue flower and a long bloom-

LAWNS: GROUND COVERS

By LYDIA C. DAVIS
Landscape Architect

To the average family doing all their own garden work, a lawn both in the front and in the back, not to mention in the parking, seems almost more trouble than it is worth. Lawns are only beautiful when well cared for. Full of weeds, or not properly mowed, watered and fertilized, they really have no reason for being. If one has not the time or strength to keep up early good looking lawns, it might do to think of something else that is less trouble. However, each home should try to have one lawn, even though quite small, as nothing can take its place for general use and play, especially where there are children. There are several ground covers that can be used elsewhere, which when established are very little bother.

Some consideration will have to be given to the location of the lawn if one lives on a built-up street, as it has long been the custom to have grass at the front of the house. If all the neighbors have front lawns, it is better to have the same, unless one's property is enclosed by a fence or hedge. A fence only a foot or two high isolates the property, and makes it logical to do as one pleases about a ground cover. In that case the grass goes in the back as part of the out-door living room, and that is the place where one usually gets most satisfaction from a lawn.

Grass in Parkings

Grass in parkings is the most difficult to keep in good shape. It seems to dry out more quickly than elsewhere, and is also often in heavy shade from the street trees. It is the parking strips, more than the front lawns, that give beauty and continuity to a street, so the neighbors should be in agreement as to what they plant. Except for looks, lawns in parkings are of very little use, and so for various reasons, this is the best place for something else.

To be of real value, plants for groundcovers should have a good appearance all the year, cover the ground well, and of course not grow tall. Flowering annuals or perennials look pretty for their season, but usually leave the ground bare for some months. Also a large area of bright color is not so pleasing to most people. Sometimes low-growing shrubs are put in wide parkings, prostrate junipers, yellow-flowered hypericums, cotoneasters and pyracanthas with their red berries, and pittosporum tobira. These last two have to be pruned at least once a year to make them spread sideways, and keep under 18 or 24 inches. The parkings at Pomona college, Claremont, are so treated, and the appearance both close and looking down the streets, is very effective.

English Ivy

English ivy, Hedera Helix, is being used more and more in parkings and instead of lawn. There is nothing better for shade, and it seems to grow just as well in the sun. The plants can be bought for a few cents each, and are set 1-2 feet to 2 feet apart, staggering the rows. They should be watered like any shrubs, kept weeded and fertilized, and in two years, should cover the ground. Along buildings, walls, and shrubbery edges, they will need clipping once or twice a year unless they are to climb. Many fine homes at San Marino and Pasadena use it altogether in parkings and the usual lawn areas, but the style seems to be slow getting started in other places. The ground

GETTING MOST FROM VEGETABLE PATCH

It is not necessary to have a large area devoted to vegetables. A small space properly managed will prove very profitable. One of the means available for making each square foot of garden space produce a maximum yield is to make successive plantings of the quick growing vegetables. Another way is to plant the quick-growing vegetables between the rows of the slow growing kind. By the time the slow growing vegetables are large enough to make use of the area recommended for their culture, the quick maturing ones will have been used.

In the vegetable garden, steady growth is important if the highest quality vegetables are to be grown. To make your garden a success you must be sure that the plants are supplied with plenty of available plant food, to bring the plants to an early fruitful maturity. Half starved plants require much more time to reach maturity and when they do they are tough, pithy and

CHATS WITH THE Master Gardener

4. Have a Perennial Flower Bed

I've always thought that sometime I'd like to experiment with a garden of nothing but perennials. It could be as beautiful a garden as you'd find anywhere, from early spring to late fall.

Almost as soon as snow had left, you'd have crocuses and snowdrops poking their heads up to let you know spring had officially arrived! Then early in May you'd begin having a regular parade of blossoms—long before most annual flowers were anywhere near ready to bloom.

First would come scarlet and yellow masses of tulips and fragrant lilies-of-the-valley. Then you'd begin having peonies—creamy white, pink and the lovely dark crimson ones. And iris—deep blue, violet, yellow, soft gray. Then as it got into June you'd be having big, creamy-white Shasta daisies. And soon your larkspur would be in bloom, splendid blue spires standing high in corner clumps and against your fence. And hollyhocks would be coming along, pink and white and scarlet, towering even above the larkspur. By July your borders would be blazing with phlox in almost every color of the rainbow. Here and there you'd have a clump of crimson and gold galliard. And of course you'd have gladiolus, blooming all summer and into the fall, with varieties of color beyond description.

And so into September, when one of the finest perennials of all would come into flower—your chrysanthemums. And with them would be your hardy asters and many-colored dahlias. And of course these are only a few of the hundreds of varieties you could have....

Start Right

Now here are some things that should be emphasized about growing perennials. I've found it hardly pays to try to raise them from seed. It's very little more expensive to buy plants or bulbs from a good reliable nursery, and your results are quicker and surer.

In preparing the soil for perennial plants, spade it to a depth of six or eight inches, and then pulverize it thoroughly. Mix in some complete plant food, using a pint of it to each 25 square feet. Water the plants thoroughly when you're putting them into the ground, and keep them moist for at least a week.

Remember this: Just because perennials are growing well and seem to need little care, you can't varieties don't thrive unless you cut their flowers regularly. Others need to be transplanted now and then; iris always does better if you take the bulbs up and separate them every third year or so. Some, like gladiolus and dahlias, need to be taken indoors for the winter. But most important, all perennials must be fed! All through the growing season they're drawing eleven different food elements from the soil. Sooner or later these elements become exhausted, and unless you replace them the plants will die. So I'd strongly recommend that you give your perennials a square meal this spring. Use a plant food that supplies all eleven of the food elements they need from the soil, in balanced proportions. Four pounds of it per 100 square feet applied to your flower borders will keep them blossoming strongly all summer long.

Cabbage and cauliflower plants should be transplanted in the cool part of the day. Late afternoon is a good time.

HERBS FOR FLAVORS

Changing styles in automobiles, radios and a clothing has been no more varied than the continual influx of new methods of cooking, and the revival of old ingredients for that purpose. European dishes with their strong seasoning have been especially favored, and the American housewife today who wishes to keep up with the times must have a vegetable garden of greater scope than the old pea, bean, corn and lettuce type which was so important to her grandmother.

At least a few of the sweet herbs are essential to the new kinds of cooking. Fortunately, however, they are easy to grow and can be had by almost anyone if he will take the trouble to plant a few in his garden. One of the agreeable characteristics of the sweet herbs is that they may be dried and put away for future use without much trouble.

Sweet marjoram, a favorite with the Germans, is an essential when dressing for the goose or turkey is concerned, and difficult to find, too. If you don't have a supply of your own. One garden row is sufficient; and after drying, the leaves and stems are rubbed to powder and stored away. Basil, thyme and the savories are others that should get attention.

Sage, the old standby for poultry dressings, is an ornamental plant as well, and may even be set out in the flower garden until harvested for the winter storage. Only half a dozen plants are needed. Caraway seeds for cookies and rolls, and dill for pickles are biennial plants that should be started this year for a supply the following season.

Garden culture for these plants calls for plenty of room so that each may develop fully. In this way a sufficiency may be grown with only a few plants. Chervil and parsley are two of the ornamental herbs that may be grown very easily. In the case of parsley, a slip can be kept in a cold frame that will give a fresh supply for the winter season.

Set off a corner of your garden this year for at least a few of the sweet herbs. They will take up little space, and the variety of seasoning possible is gratifying as compared to the slight cost and work.

Cabbages And Cauliflowers

Where garden space permits a greater variety of vegetables, cabbages and cauliflower should be grown. Not only are they two of the most delicious vegetables, but they are most healthful as well, and in the case of the cauliflower at least can be grown at a mere trifle of the expense they are sold at on the market.

Space is the all pervading problem of these two bulky plants; they should be planted at least 2 feet apart each way, and where conditions permit of only one, the cauliflower is preferable in view of the economy. Both plants like soil that is very rich, and when given plenty of moisture and proper cultivation, along with a liberal quantity of plant food, they will produce a surprisingly good yield.

Where only a few heads of cabbage are wanted for immediate consumption in the home, the savory variety is the best. It is the finest of all types, and because it is not a good keeper it is seldom found on the market. Jersey Wakefield is an old standby, and a sure header for the small garden.

GETTING MOST FROM VEGETABLE PATCH

fibrous; the result of fighting for existence. The best way to assure fine succulent vegetables in abundance is to feed them with a complete, balanced plant food. Four pounds (2 quarts per 100 square feet of garden area) is the proper rate of application.

Those vegetables which require a long growing season and for that reason are started in the greenhouse or in a hotbed, are vigorous growers when set into warm, thoroughly prepared soil that has been well supplied with plant food. In transplanting vegetables, mix thoroughly one level tablespoonful of complete plant food with the soil in the bottom of the hole before setting out the plant. Then apply plant food over a radius 2 feet from the plant, at the rate of 1 rounded teaspoonful per square foot of ground. Four to six weeks later another application of a complete plant food should be made, applying a rounded teaspoonful per square foot; apply over the entire soil with the exception of the area immediately adjacent to the plant, since the roots of the plant will have penetrated thru most of the soil area by this time.

HUNTINGTON BEACH FLOWER SHOW ATTRACTS MANY

HUNTINGTON BEACH, June 4.

A wide variety of vivid colors, exquisite perfumes and exceedingly clever arrangements were predominant in this year's flower show held in Memorial hall last week under the auspices of the Huntington Beach Garden Club. The exhibition was the sixth annual display made by the club and because of the heavy winter and spring rains the flowers were larger and more perfect than ever before, it was stated by those in charge. The program included the flower show and also the final judging of lawns, flower and vegetable gardens and outdoor living rooms in the club's annual garden contest. Mrs. Carl Yost, chairman of the club, assisted by Mrs. O. A. Mosier, was in charge of general arrangements.

Judges for the garden contest are Mrs. W. J. Bristol, Mrs. J. K. McDonald, Mrs. A. W. Frost and Mrs. D. R. White. Large crowds of local residents and also many from out of the city visited the exhibition in the afternoon and evening viewing the dozens of cut-flower bouquets and artistic designs in the main hall besides the cacti and succulents, the specimen of shrubbery, the miniatures, the out-door table arrangements and the goldfish display by Mr. Asari. Mr. Sasaki occupied one of the side rooms with a display of Japanese pottery and vases with floral arrangements peculiar to that nation. Mrs. Luther Arthur and Mrs. Frank Doesburg were responsible for a large table of roses of almost all colors and many varieties. An old kitchen utensil arrangement was arranged by Mrs. Stella White and Mrs. J. K. McDonald arranged a novel display of miniatures. Mrs. S. W. Miller and Mrs. A. Dowdy planned the stage effect.

Outdoor table arrangements were exhibited by the following business firms: M. A. Turner, the Ben Franklin store, Warner's hardware, Tovatt's hardware and Wright's shop. Norman's nursery at Costa Mesa and Blanding's of Santa Ana were also represented. Girl Scouts, Job's Daughters, the Huntington Beach Woman's club, Legion and Auxiliary posts, and many schools and churches and other social groups were identified in many ways.

When asked at what time the prize winners in the show would be announced, Mrs. Yost, the organization president, said "There will be no judging for prizes, we just hold this exhibition for our own pleasure and delight and for our friends and neighbors."

Just before the close of the fiesta, last night the prize winners in the garden contest were announced. The grand sweepstakes for landscaping, done with paid help, went to Mr. and Mrs. M. M. McCallen for the arrangement of lawn and shrubbery surrounding their new $40,000 home on Crest avenue. Sweepstakes for the best garden, most perfectly kept by the owner, went to Mrs. C. W. Patrick on Frankfort street. J. Sherman Denny, vice president of the International Cacti and Succulent association, was awarded first place for his cacti garden, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Smith received first prize for their out-door living room. First prize for a formal garden and roses went to City Councilman A. L. Henrickson, and Mr. and Mrs. William Cregg were given first prize for a restful garden. First place for a combination flower and vegetable garden was given to Mr. and Mrs. J. Halderman; first for flowers and lawn went to the Rev. and Mrs. Walter B. Cole, and a second prize for the latter combination was awarded to Clarence Orton, E. B. Allaire was given an award for the greatest improvement in a garden since March 1, the beginning of the contest.

Prizes for the above mentioned exhibitions were awarded by Mrs. Yost.

JOE'S SUPER MARKET Celebrates 17th Anniversary OPENS GIGANTIC SALE TODAY!

JOE'S MARKET CELEBRATES ITS 17TH ANNIVERSARY WITH GIGANTIC SALES TO CONTINUE EACH DAY NEXT WEEK

MARKING his seventeenth anniversary in the grocery business in Santa Ana, Joe Hersher, proprietor of Joe's Grocery, in the Grand Central Annex, today announced plans for one of the greatest sales ever held in this city.

At the same time, Harold Nelson, who leases the meat market in Joe's Grocery, and W. R. Crowther, proprietor of the vegetable market in the same shopping center, announced their plans for cooperation in the sale.

ASTOUNDING prices for quality merchandise will prevail in all three departments during the 10 days of the Anniversary Sale which starts today and ends the evening of June 15.

Joe's Market, as it is today, is far different from the Joe's Market of 17 years ago and is the result of years of experience in marketing here. There is one thing, however, that has not changed, and that is the policy of offering the shopper the best possible price for quality merchandise and courteous, efficient service at all times.

To carry out his policy of "The Best for Less" Hersher joined the Certified Grocers of California, a retail-wholesale organization of 525 stores that makes carload purchases direct from the producer, thereby eliminating the jobber's profit on practically all merchandise. This saving is passed along to the customer at Joe's Grocery.

Hersher opened his first market on South Main street 17 years ago. At that time he employed three clerks. Today he is employing 25 men and women, many of them Santa Ana people, many of whom are home owners and active in community affairs.

When the Grand Central Market was opened Hersher moved his market into that building. In 1924 he found it necessary to again move to a new location, and when the Grand Central Annex was built, established a small market in one corner of the building. Business increased as the public became better acquainted with the market, making it necessary to expand. During the ensuing 13 years the market has been remodeled on five separate occasions. Today the market has a 75 foot frontage on Broadway and a similar frontage on Second street. The large basement is adequately equipped for the storage of a large supply of merchandise, making it possible to keep a complete line of goods on hand at all times to meet the demands of the public.

The completely modern market is equipped to handle the needs of the most demanding. A complete line of nationally advertised products is on hand at all times.

Joe's Market is home-owned and home operated, with the interest of Santa Ana and Orange county residents in mind at all times, Hersher said today. Everything possible has been done to make marketing easier for the public. Although the store, founded on a cash and carry basis, is run on the self-service plan, the clerks are always ready to assist in whatever way possible.

One of the features in connection with the market is the free auto park located on First street, between Broadway and Birch streets. Those shoppers, whose order exceed $3 may have their groceries delivered free of charge to any address in the city.

Realizing that contented employees mean an efficient merchandising organization Hersher has always been a leader who moves to promote such satisfaction. Several years ago he instituted a profit sharing plan in the store whereby all employees share in profits from the year's operation. Recently he instituted a 48-hour week for all employees of the market making it necessary to increase the personnel in order to maintain the shopper service on which he has founded the store's success.

There will be no entertainment offered patrons during the 10 day anniversary event, Hersher said today. "I would prefer to do without the entertainment," he said, "and pass this saving along to my patrons in the form of unusual bargains in food stuffs. And believe me I am arranging some real bargains."

Preparatory to the stupendous sales event carload after carload of merchandise, purchased through Certified Grocers of California, have arrived at the market and been placed in the basement store room.

One of the outstanding offers made for the entire period of the sale is the special canned goods sale. With every dozen cans of Libby's, Del Monte or Fame brand canned goods purchased one can of the same product will be given to the purchaser without cost.

Every item in the store is being priced at a figure far below any price ever quoted in this city before. In addition to the bargains being offered souvenirs will be given every patron, including all-day suckers for the children, balloons, small loaves of Weber's bread and cookies.

Practically every nationally advertised food product will be offered to patrons through the medium of demonstrators who will be at the market during the entire 10 days of the Anniversary sale.

Because of his policy of making Joe's Market a strictly home-owned and operated market Hersher has created for himself a distinct niche in the business and civic life of Santa Ana. Every employee of the market is a local man or woman, many of them owning homes here and all of them paying taxes. Taking an active part in civic and church affairs of the city Her-shiser has surrounded himself with a group of employees who are as civic-minded as himself. It is this willingness to share a portion of the civic burden that has been a factor in Hersher's success as a merchant. Honest merchandise at sensible prices and courteous and efficient service at all times are the other factors.

EASTERN STEER BEEF FEATURED BY H. NELSON
CROWTHER HAS WIDE VARIETY OF VEGETABLES

All the special sales events to be staged for the next 10 days, during the celebration of the 17th anniversary of the opening of Joe's Grocery, in Grand Central Annex will not be confined to the grocery department.

Special arrangements have been made by W.R. Crowther, proprietor of the fruit and vegetable market operated in connection with Joe's Grocery in the Grand Central Annex, assuring an unusually complete stock of fruits, vegetables and melons to be offered at real bargain prices during the 10-day sale that will mark the 17th anniversary of Joe's Grocery.

Harold Nelson, proprietor of the Annex Meat market, operated in Joe's Grocery, announced today that he will have special prices on all products sold in his market.

His super-special, he said will be on fancy eastern steer beef. Nelson said that, in anticipation of this special event, he has purchased a truckload of fancy steer beef specially for the sale. This meat, the choicest the market affords, will be on sale at unheard of prices.

Similar price cuts, Nelson said will be in effect on mutton, lamb, pork and veal.

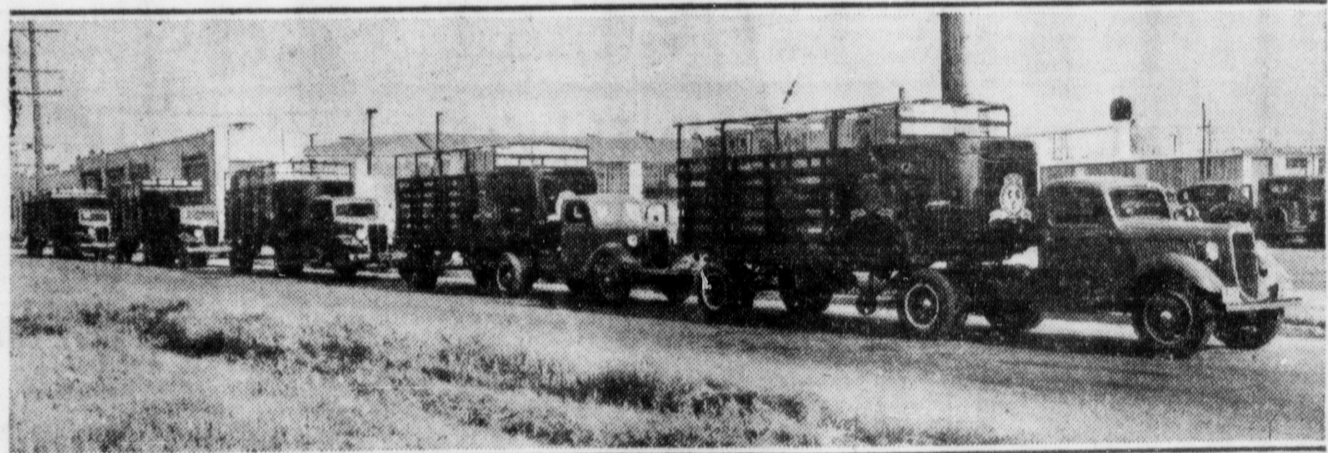

The Annex market is one of the most completely equipped meat markets in Santa Ana. Since establishing the market at its present location four years ago, Nelson has met with continued success.

Crowther's market was established in its present location 11 years ago. The continued success of establishment is due to the fact that only the freshest of produce is sold by courteous and efficient employees at reasonable prices.

Since opening his market Crowther has purchased most of his fruits and vegetables from local farmers and ranchers. His policy has made it possible for him to boost Orange county business and, at the same time, assure his patrons of the very freshest products obtainable.

CERTIFIED GROCERS' TRUCKS ON WAY TO JOE'S SUPER MARKET

Because of the foresight of Joe Hersher, proprietor of Joe's Grocery which is celebrating its 17th anniversary, starting tomorrow, patrons of that establishment have the opportunity of purchasing quality merchandise at unheard of prices.

Joe's Grocery is a member of Certified Grocers of California, a retail-wholesale organization that purchases direct from the producer, eliminating the jobber's profit. This profit is passed along to the customer.

Certified Grocers of California is an organization whose members operate 525 grocery stores and markets in California. Because of the extensive membership the organization is enabled to purchase, direct from the producer, staple groceries in carload lots.

The organization maintains a fleet of trucks that delivers groceries direct to the warehouses of member from the organization's warehouse in Los Angeles.

Founded in 1922 Certified Grocers of California has grown to one of the largest grocery-wholesale organizations in the state. With 525 store members the buying power of the group makes it possible for every member of the organization to always obtain staple goods of nationally-known brands at reduced prices. This price reduction is possible because all purchases are made in carload lots or greater quantities.

Certified Grocers of California was organized in 1922 by 50 retail grocerymen who believed that cooperative buying was the answer to the problem of independent competition with chain stores. Each of the original members of the organization contributed $50 for the purpose of forming a working organization. Each merchant was to be responsible for the prompt payment of his own purchases but was not to be responsible for the purchases of any other member. The $50 fee was used as a membership fee to finance the conduct of the organization.

FARMERS TREK TO WEST FROM 3 ARID STATES

BY NED RUSSELL

United Press Staff Correspondent PHOENIX, ARIZ. (UP)—The devastating droughts in the nation's "dust bowl" the past few years have driven thousands of ruined farmers and their families on a new "push to the west" in search of happier and richer futures.

They suffer hardships reminiscent of stories they read of the '40ers, who pioneered the west in ramshackle covered wagons, hoping to find gold and happiness in the streams of California.

They come from Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas.

But this time, the "modern pioneers" are loading their families and possessions into battered automobiles, heading for the west—and hoping.

Many have settled in Arizona and are working in the lettuce, strawberry, cantaloupe and cotton fields. Others—and they are thousands—never had a destination.

Some Favor Northwest Still others hope eventually to reach the Pacific Northwest where they feel they can find security and contentment in the fertile hills and valleys.

All tell the same story of their departure: "We left because of the drought."

Most say they endured the hardships of the crop-shattering dust storms "until we lost everything."

The task of finding shelter and food on their desperate trek isn't easy, they agree.

A family that settled some months ago on the outskirts of Glendale, Ariz., a suburb of Phoenix, is Mr. and Mrs. A. M. McLaughlin of Buffalo, Okla. Her family raised wheat—until the dust storms came.

"We tried time and again to raise crops, but the dust storms and droughts came along and caused us to lose everything. We are looking for a home now," they said. The McLaughlins have two children. Their livelihood is gained picking strawberries.

Settle Down in Shanties Many families in the Salt River Valley here have settled in crude, makeshift "shack villages." Children toddle about, some half naked and some dressed in rags. The men, when not working in the fields, sit about on boxes, smoking pipes or cigarettes, and swapping their "dreams."

Federal relief authorities, cognizant of the situation, estimated recently that 300,000 farmers are "on the move" westward, fleeing the area where their crops and businesses were ruined.

One Washington official was quoted as saying:

"Most of these farmers do not want to go on relief. They are seeking new homes where they can follow the only occupation they know—farming."

Dr. Paul B. Sears, University of Oklahoma professor, declared in a recent address at Chicago that one out of four homes in the "dust bowl" has been abandoned. He urged the federal government to buy drought damaged land and return it to a "non-productive" state. He said but one-half of the 12,000,000 acres of farm land is in use. One-fifth, he said, has been deserted.

start, and his match with Madeleine Eugénie was heartily disapproved as meaningless. However, it was fatal to Elisabeth Howard, whose charms were slightly fading, and who, with vanishing power, was growing more exigent. She began to haunt the places where Napoleon and his empress were to be. Her spies told her when they were driving in the Bois, and she would drive, too, very handsome behind her high-stepping bays. She frequented the opera on nights when the imperial court attended, taking, with very bad taste, the box opposite the royal family.

It was the end. The idyll was over. Napoleon, no longer an exile, had no longer the need of Elisabeth Howard which he once had felt. She was persuaded to retire to her country place. Her allowance, however, was still generous. State papers, discovered after Napoleon lost his throne, revealed that he had paid her five million francs in cash before his marriage.

Elisabeth Howard presently married in Florence. Her husband was a member of an old English family. She was 41. Her beauty and seductiveness had not entirely vanished. But she had lived through her hour of greatness, and she presently died.

EXPLANATORY NOTES FOR "IT'S A FACT"

Under the nickname of Vic, which some Orange schoolboy hung on him, the young man began his career early with a metropolitan newspaper, after which he created Joe Jinks, one of the more popular comic strip heroes.

A year or so ago, he quit drawing Joe Jinks in favor of another strip for a syndicate. This did not meet with the success his sport feature did and now he's back drawing Joe again. He lives in San Marino.

Ancient Bones Plowed Up In Illinois Field

YORK, Ill.—(UP)—Undisturbed for possibly centuries, several skeletons and relics have been discovered here as further evidence of the mysterious tribe of sun worshippers known as the Mound Builders, who flourished before the first white man came to Illinois' "American Bottoms."

The skeletons were unearthed in a field south of here by farmers who were plowing the land for spring planting. At a depth of a foot or less they uncovered one human skeleton intact and near by a number of bones and ornaments which indicated at least five or six other bodies had been buried there.

Scientists were asked to examine the complete skeleton. It was indicated that the body had been well over 6 feet in height. The teeth were almost perfect.

The find again aroused interest in the huge earthen structures which dot the bottom land in this region. The largest mound, still unopened, stands in a state park near Collinsville, Ill. It is known as Monk's mound and was constructed in a series of plateaus. On its top were indications that an "eternal fire" of sun worshippers had burned there until extinction of the race.

A rain of fish, occasionally reported in different parts of the world, is the result of small fish being sucked up from the water by waterspouts and carried a distance before falling back to earth.

GERMANS KILL U. S. CITIZEN

BERLIN, June 4.—(UP)—Helmuth Hirsch, 21, an American citizen, was executed today for high treason despite efforts of American authorities to obtain a reprieve.

An American national who never had lived in the United States, Hirsch was executed by the silk-hatted, gloved headman of Plötzensee prison here at dawn. Beheaded at the same time was Oscar Denner, 20, also convicted of a political crime.

Hirsch was convicted last March of possessing explosives. German authorities said that Hirsch, arrested at Stuttgart last December after arriving from Czechoslovakia, possessed bombs with which he confessed he intended to take the life of a high official. Rumor, never confirmed, was that Fueshrer Adolf Hitler might be the official.

At the time of the conviction Hirsch was described as "a stateless Jew." He had never lived in the United States. But his grandfather was a naturalized American. The grandfather returned from the United States to his native Germany. There his son, Hirsch's father, was born. This son likewise went to the United States and, his citizenship being questioned, was himself naturalized. He lived at New Castle, Pa. In 1903 he also went back to Germany. Helmuth Hirsch, his son, was born in Germany. But after his conviction, his lawyer approached American authorities and the state department after investigation ruled him an American citizen.

RUBEN GRIEGO NOT TO SERVE SENTENCE

Although found guilty of tampering with a Santa Fe railroad switch, by a jury which sat in Santa Ana Justice court, Ruben M. Griego, 50, of 1021 Fruit street, went free today. Judge Kenneth Morrison sentenced Griego to a six-months' county jail term and suspended it after ordering that Griego be on "good behavior" for a two-year probationary period.

Several prominent business men presented commendatory testimonials on Griego's behalf. Griego was arrested three days after he walked into Santa Fe station here to report a switch near his home, looked open. It was about 2 a. m. A train crew said Griego came into the station a few moments after the signal at the switch had changed.

Deputy District Atty. Clarence Sprague based the prosecution on circumstantial evidence. Atty. W. Maxwell Burke defended Griego on grounds the evidence was insufficient.

"SMITTY" BRAVELY JOINS UP TO AID WAR ON BLACK SCALE

In addition to the recently announced experiments with red-scale parasites at the county insectary at Anaheim, the county agricultural department likewise is working with two new prospective enemies of black scale, known as Coccophagus smithi and Coccophagus capensis, according to D. W. Tubbs, county agricultural commissioner.

C. smithi was introduced at the insectary on a pepper tree encased in cloth last November and December, and was kept in an outdoor cage to test his reputation for withstanding cold weather.

It was not known then that smitthi, now familiarly known at the insectary as "smitty," naturally, would get such a rousing reception from the weather man, as subsequently was given him. The frost, in fact, almost ruined the experiment by practically killing the pepper tree, but smitthi survived.

C. Capensis, sent over from Africa by Harold Compere, of the Riverside experiment station, who also located the red-scale parasites, has been established in parts of Riverside county for several years and is comparatively easy to produce in the insectary, but has not yet been recovered from field liberations in Orange county.

Nothing conclusive can be stated with respect to the possibilities of benefits from any of the new parasites received, according to Tubbs. But Compere's feat of discovering the "crip" that destroyed the mealybug has earned respect for any submissions he makes in the same field.

LAWNS: GROUND COVERS

around the new Scripps Memorial Library at Claremont, is completely covered by ivy, and it seems well adapted to such public buildings as the lawns are rarely used. In Santa Ana, the F. H. Thompsons, 617 East Seventeenth street, have English ivy growing in one front area, and the offices of Dr. J. M. Bulpitt, 135 East Santa Clara avenue, have it on the El Portal side.

The F. C. Harrington home at 615 North Lowell street, is a good example of a low fence enclosing a front yard. Instead of lawn they have set out Vinca major, running myrtle, another splendid ground cover. Myrtle has lovely blue flowers in the spring when it grows a foot or two tall, and is set out a little closer than ivy. Dr. Waldo Wehrly's new home in Lemon Heights has it covering the hillside in front, and in the back one of the honey suckles, Lonicera halliana, is used as a ground cover.

Ground Covers

In shady packings, or under trees, Ajuga reptans, bugle plant, will cover the soil quickly with its dark green leaves. It has spikes of blue flowers and seems to stand some walking over it without harm. A cover that endures sun and that can be walked upon, is Lippia repens, gray-green in color, and with pinkish-lavender flowers in the summer. But do not use it when there are little children about, as it is very attractive to bees when in flower. A lovely green cover is Zoisia tenuifolia, velvet grass, which lives up to its common name, needs no mowing, little water, and grows in interesting little hummocks. It has been seen in parkings and on terraces too steep for lawn in either sun or shade.

When preparing the soil for a ground cover, do it as carefully as you would for a lawn, if the results are to be satisfactory. Be sure that any and all Bermuda grass roots are removed, for they will grow later and be very hard to get out, or quite spoil the effect desired, as will any other weeds allowed to grow while the ground is bare. Once the ground cover has spread, there is too much shade for weeds to sprout.

MADRID SHELLED BY REBEL FORCES

MADRID, June 4.—(UP)—Artillery shells crashed into the center of Madrid at one minute intervals today in a terrific nationalist bombardment. Today's bombardment was the second big one in 24 hours. Ten persons were killed and 30 wounded, unofficial sources said, in a bombardment last night. As the nationalists shelled Madrid, loyalist artillery was reported shelling Segovia, on the other side north of the Guadarrama mountains north of the city, after a night of fighting during which government airplanes bombed the nationalist lines.

BARCELONA, Spain, June 4.—(UP)—The Spanish steamer Campero, en route to Barcelona in ballast, was torpedoed and damaged badly by a submarine today. The vessel made port at Palamos, listing heavily. No casualties were reported.

University Has 100,000 Books On Scandinavia

MINNEAPOLIS — (UP) — With more than 100,000 volumes in its Scandinavian department library, the University of Minnesota's collection is recognized as the finest library of Scandinavian work in the United States, according to Andrew A. Stromberg, department head.

The university collection is the only one in this country which contains a complete record of proceedings of the governing bodies of Norway, Denmark and Sweden, Stromberg said.

"In the past, Scandinavian students have shown slight interest in the courses our department offered," Stromberg said. "They were too close to the immigration period of their parents. As they became more widely separated

STORIES IN STAMPS

BY I. S. KLEIN
LAID FIRST PATH TO THE COAST

IN 1804 the explorers, Lewis and Clark, traveled up the Missouri river, across the Rockies and down the Columbia to the Pacific coast. It was a long and tortuous route, but not until 1844 was an easier and more direct path found to the coast. That was the achievement of Capt. John Charles Fremont, who in 1856 was elected President of the United States.

Fremont had taught mathematics in the navy, and took up surveying in 1838. He led a band of army engineers on his venture across the Rockies on a southwest route to the Pacific near what is now Los Angeles. He was hailed as the "pathfinder" to California.

Fremont continued to explore the watershed between the Mississippi and the Pacific. His explorations give him prominence in the stamps issued by the United States in 1898 in connection with the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha. He appears on the five-cent stamp.

from that era they are taking an increasing interest in studying the culture and historical backgrounds of their origins."

Stromberg, who has headed the university's Scandinavian department for 30 years and under whose direction its library was developed, believes the fourth generation since the heavy immigration of Scandinavians will produce even greater interest in the courses and facilities available for study of those peoples.

Pay Of Grumbling Picture Stars Is Pinched Down To Paltry Thousands

ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE MICROPHONE WITH HOMER CANFIELD

Marion Jordan

In Character

Jim Jordan

"The world will little note, nor long remember what we here—"

Hollywood, June 4.—FROM WISTFUL VISTA TO HOLLYWOOD... FROM RAGS TO riches... from stogies to stars... On paper it looks very simple. Thirteen weeks repeating themselves tell the story. On the air they sound new and refreshing to most of us. Fibber McGee & Molly have only just hit the top.

But actually, for Mr. and Mrs. Jim Jordan, as they are known away from microphones, ten long, heart-breaking years stretch between. No sudden success has come to Marian and Jim. It has been a slow, steady, hard fight... up hill all the way. And now that they've arrived... now that they can look down that gruelling climb... now that they're the stars, not the stogies, Fibber McGee & Molly aren't quite sure that it's all true, or certain just how to act.

It's the least star-conscious, big-time program I've ever witnessed. It is one of those rare exceptions where the "just one happy family" is an actuality. Hugh Studebaker, Bill Thompson and Harlow Wilcox share equal honors with the stars. When tall, thin Studebaker shuffles up to the mike as Sully Watson, Fibber, along with the audience, thinks that's very funny. Laughs as much as anyone else. It's not a prop laugh, either; it comes from deep down inside.

Of course, Sully Watson is funny. One of the cleverest characters drawn on the air today. But Fibber and Molly, being the stars, don't seem to mind, or try in any way to crimp Sully's style. As is so often the case in radio, deep back in the workings of their minds, you can see that, to their way of thinking, it's as much Sully's show as theirs.

When young Bill Thompson steps into the picture as Scottie, or an old man, or as Boomer, it's the same. To our way of thinking, the greatest character of them all is Tiny, the little "I betcha" girl. Molly is Tiny. By stepping close to the mike, pitching her voice high and forward, and speaking softly, Tiny is born. Molly, in turn, is also Mrs. Wrenbottom, another swell piece of acting.

The scripts are written by Don Quinn. Well padded, friendly, warm... a human sort of guy if there ever was one. From filling ears with gas and the neighborhood kids with jokes in the northwest some nineteen years ago, Don has boosted himself well up among the ace scripters. He's also writing the dialogue for Fibber and Molly's part in the Paramount movie, "This Way, Please." That's why they're in Hollywood.

Don has been turning out material for the Jordans now for over five years. Sometimes he confided he didn't know where the next meal was coming from.

It's like that in radio. The top or the bottom. There is no in-between. This year he'll net something like $50,000. Worth waiting for, isn't it?

In the control booth with Producer Cecil Underwood during last Monday's program, I had the opportunity to see how they work as well as hear what it sounded like on the air.

Fibber, the vestige of vaudeville still clinging to him, acts out a great deal of the funmaking. Don't know what he'd do if that right arm were strapped to his side. The left is kept busy holding the script.

But in a pinch he'll even forsake the script to play out a bit. For instance, during the "arm in the wringer" business, he clutched and squeezed and pulled at his arm to achieve the stress of the situation.

Molly, now, takes it easy. As far as excitement or tension is concerned, she might just as well be home entertaining the children, of which they have two. Simply dressed, she stands calmly at the microphone, sans gymnastics.

The entire troupe use one ribbon mike. A "ribbon" mike is one that is "alive" on both sides. Fibber and Molly work across from each other, with Fibber facing the control booth, Studebaker, Thompson, Wilcox and the other stogies who are called in from time to time crowd around when their lines show up. If the congestion is too great, Fibber has a tendency to step out of range, preferring to give the others the benefit of being directly in line with the mike.

Income Taxes Are Headache

By PAUL HARRISON
(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

HOLLYWOOD, June 4.—Thinking about stars' salaries, a fan's heart is wrenched this way and that. You must experience a pang of sympathy when a player grumbles about paying 60 per cent of all that he makes in income taxes, yet you also must feel just a little envious when you read of Greta Garbo's $9000 weekly wage.

Here's William Powell, demanding and getting $200,000 per picture. And Marlene Dietrich collecting a like amount.

000 for tossing off a feature—it 000 for tossing off a feature—it seems so effortless, too,—and after three of these a year, she is entitled to make a picture at some other studio for whatever the traffic will bear.

Poor Sonja Henie, you understand, is sacrificing a fortune by devoting herself to the cinema. By working hard and skating frequently in exhibitions she probably could gather in half a million dollars a year. As it is, she makes only about a quarter of a million—$120,000 per picture, two pictures a year, for five years.

More "Pittance"

But the fact is that these salaries are not so high, after all. So high, I mean, compared with salaries of other days. This season the average topnotch star receives $2500 or maybe $3000 a week. As short a time as four years ago Janet Gaynor had a $5000 contract, and Constance Bennett received a neat $300,000 for about 10 weeks' work in two pictures.

Five years before that, in 1927, the averages were even higher. For them you found male stars such as Richard Dix and Adolphe Menjou getting $5000 a week, and Thomas Meighan topping them with $7500. The pittance paid Pola Negri was $6000.

Writers were doing all right in those days, too; Emil Jennings, with two hits to his name, was scribbling for $3000 a week.

Even English pictures were paying important money. Dorothy Gish created a scandal by boasting of her $5000 salary and her $4000-a-week expense account.

Bigger and Better

Now move back to 1923. The big name then was Norma Talmadge, and the big salary was $10,000 a week. Gloria Swanson was right up there, too. Dorothy Dalton, Constance Talmadge, Pauline Frederick and Lillian Gish were drawing checks for $5000 to $7500. In that year Tom Mix was getting $4000 weekly. Before 1925 he had galloped to a peak of $17,000.

But you haven't heard anything yet. As far back as 1914, William F. "Boss" Brown, opened one of the "I will break you with my hands" enabled him to command $10,000 a week for two seasons.

In November of that year Alphonse Zukor upset the entire film industry by announcing a contract with Mary Pickford for $104,000 a year, the highest salary paid any woman up to that time.

About that time, too, Samuel Goldwyn and Jesse Lasky lured Geraldine Farrar to the Metropolitan with $50,000 for three pictures—and they shot 'em fast in those days—together with various other considerations; a house, servants, groceries and a private railway car to convey her to and from location.

By 1916, Charles Chaplin's $670,000 salary from Mutual Films began the first of a flurry of editorials comparing the salary of the President of the United States with those of the upstarts in flickerland. Somehow, movie people never seem to have worried much about these comparisons.

When Miss Pickford heard about Chaplin's good fortune, she stalked out of her negotiations with Zukor, listened to several tempting offers, returned to Famous for a guarantee of $1,040,000 plus a bonus of $300,000.

Chaplin finally topped that record.

CALL HIM JON
Because he is familiar with South Seas attitudes and customs, Jon Hall can put plenty of realism into his role as "Terangi" in the production of "The Hurricane." Hall is shown in this scene with Dorothy Lamour who has the part of Marama.

Jimmie Fidler in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, June 4.—What Greta Garbo is to MGM, Marion Davies, Katharine Hepburn, and Carole Lombard are respectively to Warners, RKO, and Paramount.

Warren William flicks one drop of perfume on his mustache each morning. Maybe it's Bob Burn's name that has started him to writing poetry. Sadly in need of good pictures to bolster fading prestige: Marlene Dietrich. Despite the swanky modernness of her home, Joan Bennett keeps an old rocking chair and a pair of soft slippers in her private "comfort room."

Telephone Joe E. Brown's home and the comedian will answer the call with: "This is Joe E. Brown talking, and who are you?" For tricky mustaches, Ronald Colman's. Wonder if Edna Best knows best in not granting Herbert Marshall a divorce? Lupe Velez modestly explains she pays no more than $15 for her day-time dresses—but what about the supplementary diamond bracelets? Edward Everett Horton hesitates that way off-screen too.

Most self-conscious girl in town: Lady Ashley in Mary Pickford's presence. When Shirley and with a First National contract to produce, direct and star in eight two-reel comedies a year for $100,000.

But in addition receive $5,000 for each reel over two, and 50 per cent of the profits on all features of five reels or more. So you can imagine how much he made on hits such as "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "Sunbyside" and "The Kid."

Today's stars are pikers. In a few more years, at this rate of retrogression, they'll be living in hall bedrooms, warming their coffee over gas jets and gathering to talk wistfully of "the good old days."

HOLLYWOOD FILM SHOP

By JOHN "SKY" DUNLAP
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

HOLLYWOOD, June 4.—(UP)—The familiar pencil sharpener with the various sized holes is a necessary gadget in all business offices and many homes. Few who use the grinders realize that Hollywood has provided the ideas for many ordinary appliances in every-day use.

The pencil sharpener device was developed by Oliver Marsh, photographer, who used the principle of the lens turret, a disc used to swing different types of lenses in front of the camera aperture.

And many a housewife on a hot day is thankful for her kitchen fan to clear out odors and heat. That blowing system originally was developed by Hollywood sound stage technicians who had to devise some way to keep the air on stages clear without noise.

The silent blower resulted and was picked up by housing engineers.

Women long have sed cosmetics originally developed for the leading stars of the screen. Millions are spent yearly by American women for face creams and lotions that also keep actresses looking their best in front of the camera.

Ray June, another cameraman, is the finder of a special glass now being used to enable "color-blind" persons to drive automobiles. While trying to kill the lens glare from studio arc lights he hit upon a scheme that enables color-blind persons to see red and green signals through their windshields. He is seeking a patent.

Theater patrons who saw a singular drab-type table in Fred Astaire's "Born to Dance" made such a clamor for copies that furniture stores are beginning to stock them and beseege actors for duplicates.

A new type life preserver for use on the high seas may be adopted from experiences of actors in "Captains Courageous." Studio chemists rigged up a special appliance worn like a coat which would take in sea water and generate enough buoyant gas in it to keep persons afloat until rescued.

Freddie Bartholomew, Lionel Barrymore, Spencer Tracy and the other characters clambering around on pitching fishing boats found good use for the coats although accidents resulted. But such a contrivance is being whipped into shape for commercial use.

Jack Dawn, a M-G-M makeup man, is credited with the plastic make-up "plastic inlays" for mutilated features new used both on the screen and by plastic surgeons.

AIR STAR RECALLS 'BUCKSHOT' EPISODE IN FIRST KFI DRAMA

Memories of her first dramatic performance on the air, over KFI in Los Angeles in 1929, when that station was pioneering dramas, are chiefly concerned with a large load of buckshot, for Alice Hill, the Nancy of "We Are Four," now aired from coast to coast. Not that they had to take Alice out and shoot her.

But, to test possibilities of dramatic shows on the air, officials of KFI gave 15 minutes weekly to the School of Speech, U. S. C., where Alice was a senior.

"Each member of the cast had to work the sound effects for his or her own part," Alice recalls. "My part included a scene in which I was supposed to be threatened with drowning. To create the illusion of the rushing, swishing sound of the flood waters, I had to manipulate a heavy box filled with buckshot, tipping it back and forth so that the buckshot would slide from one end of the box to the other. At the same time that I was performing this labor, I was supposed to deliver tense, dramatic lines into the microphone to bring the hearts out of the listeners. I don't know about the listeners, but the hearts of the players were wringing all right."

For several years after graduation from the university, Alice displayed no interest in radio, probably as a result of those harrowing early experiences, devoting herself entirely to stage work. During the last few years, however, she has become one of the busiest actresses in the Chicago studios. "We Are Four" comes over KFI at 8:45 a. m.

Adolf Hitler had ambitions to become a professional artist. During the World War, he made several watercolor paintings at the front.

IS IT AN EXAMPLE OF NATIONAL PLANNING?

When the Republic Steel Company is not able to send food by mail to the men who desire to work rather than strike and the Federal Government neglects or refuses to see that the United States mail is not interfered with by the men who worked for and contributed half a million dollars to help elect the President, we cannot help but wonder whether this is an example of national planning.

Possibly our local educational leaders who require our children to read 3700 pages of Rugg's books, advocating national planning, can answer this question.

If the United States Government will not use its resources to protect the rights of men who believe that working benefits society, we certainly do not have the liberty we so boastfully talk about. When the United States Government permits those people who brazenly claim they paid $500,000 and worked for the election of Roosevelt to interfere with the mails, every thinking citizen should get some conception of what national planning really means. We wonder how far the Federal Government will have to go in this kind of national planning before our educators will do a little reading and studying of history and find out how far they have drifted, in training our youths, from the principles advocated by such men as St. Paul, Benjamin Franklin, Emerson, Spencer, Darwin, Mill and Adam Smith.

National planning, as advocated in our public schools, is very close in harmony with the teachings of Karl Marx, John Lewis and Harry Bridges. They have little conception of what liberty is.

REHABILITATING PROBATIONERS

Judge James L. Allen in a plea before members of the Orange County Press Club Wednesday night, asked that body to support him in a campaign to aid in rehabilitating prisoners following their probationary period.

Judge Allen cited several cases where young men have been given a helping hand by interested parties and, they eventually became upright citizens.

A discussion of the subject brought out a suggestion that perhaps the numerous service clubs of the county might make this rehabilitation work a part of their program. The Orange Rotary club at the present time is doing wonderful work along these lines. Orange boys who have been sent to Whittier State school are taken in hand by the Orange Rotary club after the boys have been released from custody. They are provided jobs and their progress and activities supervised. As a rule these boys turn out to be good citizens.

It's a real humanitarian work. The various clubs in the county can find plenty of work along this line. If they will contact Judge Allen they will be given a great deal of enlightenment on the subject.

This idea that originated at the press club meeting is passed on to the various luncheon and service clubs.

WHAT'S IN A NAME

Just what Culver City expects to gain through its campaign to steal the name of Hollywood away from the film capital, is beyond our comprehension.

The Culver City Chamber of Commerce is circulating petitions to change the name of the city from Culver City to Hollywood. The president of the Chamber of Commerce, Blaine Walker, says Hollywood is not incorporated, has no post office of its own, no city government and that 60 per cent of the movies are made in Culver City.

The oft repeated question "What's In a Name?" may be answered if Culver City should manage to acquire the name of Hollywood.

But even if this should transpire, the Hollywood of today would always be Hollywood to the people of California, and perhaps to the people of the nation. For after all there's only one Hollywood Boulevard where the stars "strut their stuff." There's only one Chinese theater, only one Egyptian theater and there's only one Hollywood Bowl.

From this vantage point it appears that the president of the Culver City Chamber of Commerce has missed his calling. He should be in the publicity department of one of the studios.

Maybe he is.

ARTIFICIAL PRICES MOST MISLEADING

Every person wants to use his time and energy, or his savings,—his former time and energy—to the best advantage. If the government does its duty of preventing monopolies that cause artificial prices and wages, then a high wage, or high profit, is a good guide for a young man who wants to learn a trade, or an investor who wants to invest, as to what society wants done.

But, if prices are artificial, then the inexperienced are very likely to be misled and learn a trade for which there is little demand, or make an investment that is already over-capitalized. When the investments are made in lines of industries that are over-capitalized, then the unsophisticated, the demagogues and the would-be public educators contend that people have oversaved and they start a campaign against the one thing that makes a high living standard possible; namely, better tools, more capital.

Artificial prices are much more dangerous to the inexperienced, small investor than they are to the farsighted, shrewd, analyst in investments. He can quickly ascertain that prices are high because of artificial monopolies and refrain from entering the business. The inexperienced man is usually the big sufferer.

The sooner society comes to learn that monopolies not only rob the consumer but also rob the investor and misguide the young man seeking a life work, the better off society will be.

Register Clearing House

(The articles under the Clearing House are published for the purpose of an exchange of ideas and this newspaper. Contributors are urged to confine their articles to 300 words.)

Editor Register: When, in his eagerness to discredit a big man or his policies, a commentator resorts to deliberate misquotation of the person under fire, the commentator loses his case in the minds of thinking readers.

In his column yesterday, Hugh S. Johnson tells how the brutal cowardly Ford employees who were satisfied with their jobs and wanted to be permitted to work, beat off the C. I. O. trouble makers sent by Henry Martin to close the Ford plants. Johnson thinks two hundred thousand workmen should quit good jobs and let their families starve because John Lewis ordered them to.

To justify his conclusion, Johnson quotes Henry Ford as saying that he would "close his plants forever before he would deal with representatives of his workers."

No one knows better than Hugh Johnson that when he took the defeat N. R. A. to Michigan to force its codes on the motor industry, he found that Ford and General Motors were paying their men better wages and treating them better than the N. R. A. codes required; that these industries had for years dealt collectively with their men, and he could not "crack down" on the employers. What Henry Ford did say last week was that if he were not permitted to bargain with his own workers, but should be forced to take dictation from an outside agency, he would close his plants. Well, why not?

Cordially yours,
H. C. MOWER.

Editor Register: Mr. Walker, I bow to your superior line of argument and as a decoy I feel I am a success. I regret that I may have cast suspicion on the Register, as one item in your "Surrejoinder" might intimate.

When I hear the old stock-worn phrases, predatory, pillaging, plundering, rapacity—this is not new, it is as old as demagoguery and passes as the horse and buggy. The first street corner agitator I remember listening to, (in yokel wonder), used about the same terms.

You will pardon me if I do not attend to your case at this time, as you must be as busy as the proverbial "one armed fiddler with the lutes," trying to hang onto the tail of the Roosevelt kite with one hand and scratching the strings of adverse criticism with the other. These must be perilous moments when the wind veers and it takes those hair-raising nose-dives. As for the trivialities, airy persiflage, piffle, etc., the readers must decide, and if the great white father now burning the midnight oil devising means of knocking the props from under predatory interests, a lot of us may have to go on the W.P.A., but I shall try to give an honest day's work for my pay. I have seen that side.

And now Mr. Editor, having read the well prepared articles under the heading "Better Jobs for All" by R. C. Hoiles, I consider it one of the best expressions of thought advanced to hold this country to a sane line of thinking. But the trouble is that the great mass of the present regime supporters will not read these facts, a lot of them taking no chance on anything that might change their opinion.

Now I ask you Mr. Hoiles, after you have gone into the care of preparing and presenting in a highly intellectual way, how can you reach the multitude whose only argument is: "You have to give it to him" (meaning Mr. Roosevelt of course), that he is doing something to help the poor man? On the face of this argument it sounds good to a lot of his admirers.

Now the Register has been very generous with its space, allowing me to express some of my views in perhaps "persiflage, piffle" and some other ways, but I do not believe in using up a column or two spreading frosting and politeness of expression when all the time I am trying to call the other fellow a prevaricator or something else.

Being one of seventeen million that were not sold on the Roosevelt campaign promises, and while I could not subscribe one hundred percent to those of his opponent he was my choice. When Mr. Roosevelt was elected I think it can be frankly said that the rank and file of his opposition were in hopes that he was really gifted with the superior brand of wisdom and that we had been mistaken in our judgment. In a classified war column a firm desirous of hiring help are insistent that such help be men of experience (not theory) in their particular line of work. But Mr. Roosevelt changed the order, immediately a vindictive smoke screen is smudged in Washington on down to the small trumpeters that have to hold a moistened finger to the Roosevelt breeze each morning to find which way they stand.

The old cry—oppressors of the poor! down with the rich! If we conscripted every dollar of the so-called, predatory, pillaging, plundering, rapacious brutes, and these stony faced women carried their gory heads on bloody pike. Tell me! You champions of the oppressed that never furnished a day's labor in your lives, just what would you do then?

News Behind The News

BY PAUL MALLON

SHADOW BOXING—

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Some disciples of the new ordeal in the senate cocked a doubting eye at the Harrison resolution, proposing a congressional investigation of rich income tax deceivers. The message from Mr. Roosevelt said specifically he wanted the treasury to make the investigation. He said nothing about a congressional inquiry.

Offhand, it appeared that such an eminent White House lawyer as Senator Pat Harrison was either committing treason or else got his signals mixed.

As a matter of fact, he was not guilty on either count. The average run of new ordeallists were just not in on the play.

If Senator Harrison had dared confess it, he could have said he got the copy of his resolution from the treasury department indirectly, if not directly. He could also have said that he sent the congressional bill drafters down to the treasury to work on the resolution, so that the law preventing the treasury from recommending legislation directly could be subscribed to, technically.

PILLORY—

The play which befuddled congressmen did not understand is simply this:

The treasury does not need to make an investigation to find out who the deceivers are. It knows now. Furthermore, it has just about all the power it really needs to get any additional information it really wants, without obtaining further authority from congress.

What the treasury wants is to have congress give out the names and advertise them far and wide in the customary manner of congressional investigation committees.

The plain fact is either the president or the treasury could have made public the names of tax dodgers without fear of criticism. But that method would only have provided a flash in the publicity pan. The sensation would have occupied the public mind for only a few days. But a joint congressional investigation committee can give out a few names a day, summon the worst miscreants and examine them, keep typesetters finding new and bigger headlines daily.

It will give the nation something to think and talk about other than the Supreme Court (now adjourned, unpacked), the minimum wage and minimum hours discussion, and other pending herrings, red, dead or dying.

No one ever accused this administration of not knowing its publicity.

INCORPORATION—

Another herring which seems to have left a befuddling scent may be found in the Congressional Record, page 6708, first column. There Senate Leader Robinson is recorded as speaking some good words for the O'Mahoney bill, proposing a federal charter for all corporations. Up to then, Mr. Robinson had not said anything good about it during the year or more it has been pending. The measure was supposed to have been relegated to the filing case of unwanted legislation. The unofficial Attorneys General Corcoran and Cohen were against it, and all trustworthy inside advice indicates it is dead.

Naturally, word spread among lobbyists, observers and even legislators that the administration was going to take the bill out of moth balls and push it as a method of controlling production, prices (in lieu of the expected fair trade practices method) and corporate control. Robinson, it is being said, was playing advance agent for a White House move to this effect.

Don't be too sure. There may be other explanations of the Robinson endorsement, personal and senatorial. At least the best of trustworthy sources are guaranteeing that the bill will not pass.

NOTE—Unannounced administration objections to the O'Mahoney bill are grounded primarily in fear that it would open the federal courts wide to suits by incorporating, which would tie up application of the act, perhaps for years, with the outcome uncertain. Also the liberals in the administration believe the standards of incorporation for most states (New York, for instance) are now high, as a result of years of experience, and a federal standard would wreck the reforms thus accomplished and necessarily fix a lower general standard. At least, it would open a whole new field of corporate law for which no one now can see the end.

OFF THE RECORD—

Floor Leader Rayburn was delivering an impassioned plea to the house, urging it to accept the president's compromise on the relief bill. He had just reached the climax when a page boy pulled at his coat, saying:

"The Lord is calling upon you."

Rayburn, hurriedly, in an aside, whispered:

"Tell him to wait."

The boy, realizing Rayburn had probably failed to catch the name, said, louder this time:

"The Lord is outside."

There was no use whispering any more, as a number of colleagues were noticing the scene, so Rayburn turned to the lad and said aloud:

"It is a bad time for the Lord or anyone else to be calling on me for help, just now."

Explanations developed that the caller was Lord Marley, minority leader of the British house of peers. Rayburn told him about it later.

OUR CHILDREN

BY ANGELO PATRI

MISTAKEN GENEROSITY

"Give the little wagon back to Lynn, now. That's a good boy. We're going home. Give Lynn his little wagon."

"O, let him have it. That's all right. Lynn won't mind. Not at all. So glad you came over. No, no, it's quite all right. Lynn won't mind, really."

Lynn looked after the departing wagon with a scowl. "Now, now, Lynn, don't be stingy. I'll get you another wagon. You must share things with your friends. You can have another wagon the next time we go downtown."

Lynn looked stubborn, so mother went away and left him where he stood on the walk, looking down the street after his guest's departing form. When his mother went to call him in to get ready for his evening meal she found him busy filling his little wagon with gravel. Yes, it was his own little red and yellow wagon. The scratch on the prancing lion that decorated its once shining surface identified it.

"Why, Lynn, isn't that your old wagon?"

"It's not an old wagon. It's my own nice little wagon that you went and let Bud Johnston take. That's what it is."

"How did you get it back?"

"I watched, and when he went in I went and took it. That's what I did."

"But Lynn, I gave it to him."

"You couldn't give it to him 'cause it was my wagon. And I took it home again."

"That was naughty of you, son."

"No, it was naughty of you to give my wagon to him. I don't take his wagon. Nor nothing. It's my own wagon. That's what it is."

"I'm sure I don't know what to do. I gave him that wagon and now—"

"He can have the new one out of the store that his mother can buy for him when she goes downtown. Like you said you would buy one for me. He wants a new wagon. Ding, dong, out the road. Big load coming."

When mother laid her perplexity before father that night he laughed. "He surely had the right to it that time, Helen. Give the other kid a new wagon and let it go at that. We can't give away what doesn't belong to us. Lynn is right. You made a mistake, and you'll have to make the best of it."

Did you ever give away anything that belonged to a child? If you did you made a mistake. Children cling to their possessions. They have a keen sense of ownership. It is best to cultivate that wisely so that the youngster learns to respect the property of others as much as he wants them to respect his. Don't even use his things without asking permission, much less give them away.

And while we are talking about it, secrets are not to be given away either. That is a form of disloyalty that children find hard to understand or forgive. Keep your child's secrets. Don't tell them to friends to win their sympathy or their laughter. It is giving away what belongs to the child. It is betraying a trust that, once lost, can never be restored to you.

Better Jobs FOR ALL

—By R. C. HOILES

Future Policy of Agriculturists

Ogden Mills, in his lecture before the new school for social research, discusses the future of agriculture. He makes some very important comments.

In talking as to the effects of farm legislation in an attempt to protect the interests of the farmer, he remarks, "When the government pays farmers to quit growing certain crops, in reality it pays them to grow other crops, with the result that such action may result in shifting the burden of the depression from one group of growers to another group."

In commenting on the government's attempt to prevent failures in farming, he remarked, "For an industry that admits of no sinking is likely to become a dumping ground of cast-offs from other industries, and to lose its vital energy." This statement is certainly true. If any industry is protected by the government, it will attract great crowds of others seeking protection from competition. Just think where this eventually leads. The government soon has more and more people on its hands.

Mr. Mills says, "Though under the gentle rain of cheques he may be temporarily blind to the efforts to collectivize him, the farmer is the supreme individualist. He will be the last among us knowingly to surrender his liberty."

"But if he is to preserve his individuality and liberty; if he is not to become a ward of the government; if he is to continue lord of his own farm; he too must accept the main principle of free enterprise, the competitive principle. "Once comparable efforts are rewarded in agriculture to the same extent as in other industries, the farmer must go ahead under his own power—sink or swim."

He tritely says on the subject of attempting to induce the farmer to become owner, "In planning to reduce the tenancy, care should be exercised to the end that the prospective owner not become a ward of the government. The tenant-recipients of government funds must not be reduced to the status of an Indian on a reservation." He points out that our present attempt to restrict production is the first time in the nation's history that the financial resources of government have been devoted to reducing the supply of the essentials of life.

This attempt to protect the farmer, he reasons, comes largely from the fact that manufacturers are often protected by tariffs. He practically advises the reduction of tariffs on those things the farmers have to buy and again he clearly reasons when he says, in regard to combating tariffs, "My answer is that national prosperity is not promoted by creating one destructive force to offset another destructive force. The welfare of the nation demands the elimination, not the multiplication, of such forces."

He is certainly right in this matter. Two wrongs do not make a right. We can only have a better standard of living, better jobs for all, by having more production. Instead of arbitrarily limiting any commodity in order to bring up the price.

He gives some very interesting figures. "In 1922, we exported 55 per cent of our cotton. On an average, during the twenties, it required from 60,000,000 to 70,000,000 acres to supply foreign demand. In 1925, this figure dropped to 27,000,000."

"The quantity of non-agricultural exports in 1926 stood at 87 per cent of the 1922 level."

"The 1936 volume of farm exports amounted to only 43 per cent of the pre-depression peak, and was the smallest since 1877."

He recognizes that labor unions force the manufacturers to pay high prices, which very seriously affects the farmer.

He says on this subject, "But this is certain. Unless the higher money wages can be absorbed by industry, and not passed on to the consumer in the form of higher prices, it means the arresting of progress."

"Higher prices—I am not talking of a general rise in the price level, but of individual increases caused artificially, mean lower consumption, because fewer and fewer people can buy. Less consumption means less production—that is, fewer and fewer goods to divide."

Competition among all is truly the only method of better jobs for all.

Little Benney's Note Book

Me and Sam Cross was wawking along just wawking along, and he said, Let's play Blind Flying.

How? I said, and Sam said, We take turns being the pilot and the ground station, and the pilot shuts his eyes and tries to wawk in a strate line, and if he goes to bump into something the ground station yells Radio beam, and whoever goes the ferthest without bumping wins the game. I'll be the first pilot, and if you leave me bump instead of yelling Radio beam it counts a point against you, he said.

And he shut his eyes and kept on wawking and started to go up into a tree, me yelling Radio beam just in time, and when I went pilot and shut my eyes and wawked nearly 4 payments before Sam yelled Radio beam to keep me from banging into a house, and then Sam shut his eyes again and only went about 4 steps without starting to bump.

Making me way ahead, and I was trying it again with my eyes shut and I thawt I heard a suspicious sound and I peeked a short peek out of one eye and here what was Sam Cross doing but moving his jaws like lightning, and when it was his turn to go pilot again I quick started to make a noise like somebody eating, and Sam quick opened his eyes, saying, Hay, there's something funny going on here, what's you eating?

Who? Me? Nothing I said, and Sam said, Leave me serch you?

If you leave me serch you I will I said. What's fare for one is fare for 2, I said, and Sam said, Well all rite.

And we serched each other at the same time and I found a little white bag with 7 jelly beans left in it, and he gave me 2, less on account of generosity than on account of properly being ashamed not to, and I asked him if he wanted to play Blind Flying any more and he said no.
